OUR ATHLETIC IDEALS.

The Cornhusker Banquet the other night was, in many ways, most satisfactory and encouraging to those interested in the welfare of athletics in general and of football in particular. The enthusiasm, the courage for the future, the loyalty evidenced after such a series of misfortunes as Nebraska has experienced this season, gave unmistakable proof of the genuineness and depth of our college patriotism and our faith in athletics.

But there was another side to the banquet on which it is not so pleasing to comment. We refer to the conduct, during the banquet, of a considerable part of the team—of so considerable a part, in fact, that it may well be considered representative of the team. If this were the sole instance of anything of this nature, it might well be charged to the ebullient spirits of boys celebrating the termination of a long period of hard work and self-denial. However, we fear that it was rather but the result of the spirit, and the indication of the standards, which have long dominated the team but have not before been publicly manifested.

We believe a University should not only insist that its athletic teams should be composed of bona fide students and that they come up to the average standard in their collegiate work, but that it should also require the members of teams in their capacity of representatives of their University, to conduct themselves as gentlemen. The reputation of a University, as regards the character and standards of its students is, to a considerable extent, in the hands of its athletes as they visit other institutions. The very great influence and prestige which the athletic body of a school possesses is a good or a curse to the institution according to its personnel, and especially according to the way its members conduct themselves while actually representatives of the University, whether on the Athletic Field, at the training table, or on the trips the team makes. In view of this fact, and remembering some of the recent newspaper comment on our team, we believe that the University of Nebraska should insist, and see to it, that its athletes, whenever they come together to represent Nebraska, and wherever they may be, shall so conduct themselves that they may bring no reflection upon the University nor mar its athletic escutcheon.

Candy Sale.

The Y. W. C. A. will have a sale of home-made candy all day Friday, December 7, in the Association rooms. The quality is guaranteed and the prices are low.

Good resolutions and good deeds are the order of the new year. They should be recorded in one of our neat little diaries. Drop in the Uni. Book Store and see them.

You want something, perhaps it is only a collar button; it doesn't matter what, just stop in at Unland's, around the corner at Eleventh and O.

Ye olden candlesticks and ye new ones, too. A five-minute peep at our old candlesticks and Tiffany glassware will start you buying. Ask Harris, the jeweler, 1137 O St. He's reliable.

CROSS EYES

You can't afford to neglect your child's visual sense. Cross eyes in children are frequently the result of muscular weakness, which may be overcome with proper glasses. If you have a child thus afflicted, get our opinion. And don't forget—the earlier, the easier—in eye care.
