make a closer study of this glorious Anglo-Saxon inheritance and cultivate knowledge of Shakespeare's plays, but first study the man and his environments. When fourteen years old he left school, but he was gifted with a great mind, having an intense sympathy with nature. He could express human life because he knew all classes and phases of life and could tell it simply and directly. If the plays seem vague at first, get the plot and purpose from Lamb's essays. Then read them for the history, philosophy and noble principles in his characters showing lights and shadows, vice and virtue, poverty and wealth. Do not rely upon the judgment of commentators, unless it be to find out the meanings of old words, but follow Shakespeare's own directions. The "Merry Wives of Windsor" is a play written at the request of Queen Elizabeth to see Falstaff in love, and was completed in fourteen days. It pictures the times and manners of Queen Elizabeth and is a splendid comedy. Mr. Hackett gave several selections and impersonations and in conclusion made a strong appeal to students to use pure and correct English. There is too great a tendency to cut short words and not to enunciate clearly which shows lack of discretion. To show the elasticity of English in emphasizing and accenting correctly Mr. Hackett gave the amusing impersonation of "I don't know.", Forestry Boys' "Pow Wow." Twenty-four of the Forestry "boys", including Professor Miller and Dr. Clements, held their annual "Pow Wow" last Saturday evening. They gathered south of Epworth Lake and
