Original Research.
Educators and students of education thruout the world are watching with interest the struggle in England to remodel their system of education. The effort is being made to centralize the system in the hands of the state, and to take it out of church hands, where to a considerable extent it now lies. In uly the House of Commons passed the Bierell Education Bill, but the House of Lords, which exceeds our senate in conservatism, so amended the bill that it was unacceptable to the Commons when returned. Apparently this bill has been dropped, but in what new form the measure will appear causes much speculation.

The Astronomy people are doing some interesting work. The class in Beginning Astronomy have been searching the heavens for double stars. There are usually three or four of these phenomena visible thru a telescope. One of the experiments made by the class in Geodetic Astronomy during this week was to determine the latitude of Lincoln by observation of the sun. Those who have been interested in watching newly-discovered heavenly bodies are at present somewhat embarrassed in their attempts to observe Metcalf's comet, as it may be seen only from 3 to 4 a. m.
