ENGLISH CLUB.

Program of Three Stories Carried Out at Home of Miss Garber.

The program of the English Club, which met with Miss Garber on Washington street last Friday evening, consisted of the reading and criticism of three original short stories. The scenes of the first two were laid in the West, and the stories dealt with some of the more spectacular characters peculiar to the West. The third story was wholly oriental, having the scene laid in the desert regions of the East. The stories all indicated careful work, and a considerable amount of character study.

Zoological Club.

The following will be the program at the meeting of the Zoological Club at eight o'clock Tuesday evening, February 26, 1907:

"Notes on the Biologies of the Rhynchophora," W. Dwight Pierce.
 "The Protozoan," by Gary M. Calkins, reviewed by R. H. Wolcott.

Astronomy students are just now watching the evening star Mercury. It is visible now for a few evenings only, just above the setting sun in the evening twilight, and its position is unusually favorable for observation. Mercury is a planet that very few people have ever seen because it is almost always too close to the sun to be distinguished.

The Historical rooms will be open Tuesday evening, February 26 from 7:30 to 9:30 when Mr. E. E. Blackman will deliver an address on "Costumes of Indian Men." The open meeting last Tuesday evening was a marked success.

Glee Club.

The following Glee Club dates are announced: February 28, York; March 1, Friend; March 2, Exeter; March 16, Council Bluffs, Iowa; March 20, Lincoln.
