CORNHUSKER TROUBLE.

The seeming inability of the law editors to understand the policy pursued by editor-in-chief Meyers in arranging plans for the 1907 Cornhusker may be accepted as explanatory of their conduct in the present disagreement over the law department of the book. Certainly the policy of the editor-in-chief has been no more puzzling to the law men than the policy followed by them in opposing his plans has been to Mr. Meyers.

That the law editors have been unable to comprehend the editor-in-chief's stand for a united University book, and their failure to understand that he led by a strong man, for the obstinacy with which they have resisted indicates a misconception of the responsibility and duties of the editor-in-chief.

An unpleasant feature of the present disagreement has been the personal clashes. If Mr. Meyers has any enmity against the law editors it has been brought about by their blunder in opposing his fair and equitable plans for the arrangement of the book.

A failure to comprehend the editor-in-chief's plans could alone account for the opposition of the law editors, and yet it seems improbable that such enlightened minds as those of the law school should fail to understand plans so simple as those proposed by Mr. Meyers. The disagreement has been enlarged somewhat by the attacks of the law editors so that it now involves not only the question of a united representative University book, but also the question of the supremacy of the office of editor-in-chief.

Will preside at Nebraska-Wisconsin Debate.

Hon. Williams J. Bryan has been secured by the University Debating Board to preside at the Nebraska-Wisconsin debate in Memorial Hall on April 5. Mr. Bryan's acceptance was received yesterday by Professor Fogg through Mr. Charles W. Bryan. Mr. Bryan is to speak in Iowa on Saturday, April 6, but he will not leave Lincoln until after the debate Friday evening.

In addition to presiding at the first Nebraska-Wisconsin forensic battle on Nebraska soil, Mr. Bryan will give an address. The subject to be debated is one in which he is very much interested—the private versus public ownership of street railways.

The news that Mr. Bryan has consented to preside and speak was greeted with enthusiasm on the campus. Mr. Bryan attended the Nebraska-Mis-desires to produce the best book possible and that he is acting with such a purpose, affords one solution of the unwarranted opposition manifested by them, since they first saw his plans for the 1907 Cornhusker. That such plans are necessary for the successful publication of the book has long been apparent to the minds of all the conservative editors on the Cornhusker staff. The separation of the material as requested by the law men would mar the unity of the book as a whole and cause a cheap looking collection of department books to be published under one cover. And above the fact that the Cornhusker as a representative book would be destroyed, rests the endangered integrity of the position of editor-in-chief.

Mr. Meyers has asked nothing more of the law college than he has of every other college represented in the book. The opposition of the law editors to his restrictions demonstrates that the position of editor-in-chief must be fil-

Will Holman who took an M. A. degree in Physics here last year, and is now studying in Geothingen, Germany, writes enthusiastically of his experiences there. He is especially pleased with the way Germans present their theory and mathematics. Mr. Holman is doing research work, dealing with electrical properties of crystals. He spent the Christmas vacation in Berlin and Dresden.
