Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second-class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

A certain spirit has been manifested lately between the candidates for various offices that is especially commendable. When two men enter the field in opposition to each other running for an office this should not be, surely a sign for personal hostility and a time for spreading "stories."

Some elections have occurred here in which each side seemed to feel itself in duty bound to commit to the currents of rumor as many mean remarks about the other as possible. They do that sort of thing out in real politics, perhaps, but there is no call for it here. It has not been an uncom-

as has been the impression among many, or rather it may be said, among most students with regard to certain classes of books.

For Temple Building.

As the temple building nears completion the building committee are more satisfied than ever with the substitution of Bedford stone for terracotta. This was done at considerable additional expense for which the committee assumed the responsibility. A number of contributions are still coming in which is going to make up this deficiency. mon thing of late months to see two candidates holding a small-sized mutual reception just before election, and again after the event where one had been defeated, both acting toward his rival in the most fraternal sort of way.

This is the proper spirit every time. It shows that University men are big enough to look over the top of a little defeat and see things in a broader way. No election ought ever to establish the foundation of a feud.

Students are, after this year, to get their text-books at cost according to the present plans of the Regents. Whether everybody will find himself as much richer as he expects under the new regime remains to be seen. Some will undoubtedly be disappointed. It is only fair to the book stores to say that the Regents declare, themselves, there is no tremendous profit made on text-books. There will be some saving, of course, considerable saving, but no fifty and seventy-five per cent profits
