PRELIMINARIES

FOR TRACK MEN ON ATHLETIC FIELD NEXT FRIDAY.

Competition Close—Very Large Number of Entries—Only Appearance of Team at Home.

The "home meet," the annual track team try-out, will be held next Friday afternoon on the athletic field. This event promises to produce several exciting features. There are a very large number of entries and the competition will be close in all the events. Several good records have already been made and it is more than probable that a number of University records will be broken.

In the dashes, Burruss, Dunlap, Coe, and McDonald are showing up well, McDonald and Dunlap also being in the hurdles.

There are a large number of entries in the half and the mile. Morgan, Theisen and Davis are doing good work in the half, Morgan especially is running exceptionally fast. Alden and Morgan will have a close race in the mile Alden also being in the two-mile.

In the field events, Rathbone, Knode are working on the high jump, while Dunlap is showing up well in the broad jump. "Gil" McDonald is vaulting in fine form. In the weights there will be close competition between a number of big men.

A large crowd should be out Friday afternoon as the meet is sure to be very exciting with each event closely contested. Further as the track schedule now stands it will be the only opportunity for seeing the track team at work this year. All the other meets are "out of town" and Manager Eager has been unable to secure a good home meet for May 18.

FARM TERM ENDS

THIRTY-SIX MEN TO GRADUATE FRIDAY EVENING.

Remarkable Growth of School—Its Relation to the University—Commencement Program

Friday evening, April 26th, the fifth annual commencement of the Nebraska School of Agriculture will take place in Memorial Hall. A class of thirty-six young men will receive certificates and twelve of these will receive commissions in the Nebraska National Guard. This year's class raises the total number of graduates from the three years' course in the School of Agriculture to one hundred and twenty-eight. It is felt that no school of the same age can present a better record of its work.

The School of Agriculture is a department of the University of Nebraska, and is included in the Industrial College. No such thing as an Agricultural College exists. The college courses in agriculture are for the most part offered on the campus and some of them are entirely given there. The laboratory work in agriculture, horticulture, animal husbandry, dairying and agricultural chemistry is done at the University Farm. All the work in the School of Agriculture, which as has previously been said, is a department of the University, is carried on at the Farm. Two courses are offered; the three years' course which opens the first of November and continues for one hundred and forty-four days of actual school work; the winter course which begins the first of January and lasts for fifty days.

The states which are thought to be foremost in agricultural education are carrying on this work in their state universities. These states are Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio and Nebraska. In other states the instruction in agriculture is given in separate institutions, and the result has been greatly to increase the expense to taxpayers without in any degree adding to the efficiency or popularity of the instruction. Under the leadership of her University, Nebraska has made more rapid advancement in agricultural education than has been effected in any other state of the union in the same length of time.

It is to be regretted that the name "State Farm" has obtained such wide currency. The term should be "University Farm," for that shows that the School of Agriculture is a part of our great educational institution.

A large audience will assemble Friday evening, to hear the accomplished President Creelman of the Agricultural College at Guelph, Canada, which in advanced methods and in organization is perhaps the most ideal institution of its kind on the continent. President Creelman's subject will be "The New Agriculture." He is a man of wide experience in matters pertaining to agriculture. No one can afford to miss hearing his address.

CARNEGIE PENSIONS ANDREWS.

Retiring Allowances Made to the Chancellor and Other Educators.

Chancellor E. Benjamin Andrews is one of the four prominent educators to whom Andrew Carnegie has just decided to give retiring allowances. Last Monday, J. D. Bowman, secretary of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, announced that a pension would be allowed to several men of state institutions who had rendered distinguished academic service. In accordance with the plan, the executive committee of the foundation has given retiring allowances to the following educators: E. Benjamin Andrews, Chancellor of the University of Nebraska, who has been a prominent teacher and educator for thirty years; Francis H. Smith, for more than fifty years Professor of Natural Philosophy at the University of Virginia; William V. Folwell, for fifteen years President of the University of Minnesota and now Professor of Economics in that university; Amos N. Currier, for forty years Professor of Latin and Greek at the University of Iowa, and now Dean of the College of Liberal Arts at that institution.

LARGE ORDER.

Over Two Thousand Commencement Programs Sold.

Yesterday afternoon the last orders were taken for Senior programs. At the close of the time limit as set, Chairman Syford said there had been 2,725 programs ordered, these by 195 people making an average of fourteen to each purchaser. Since there are 238 in the class, this shows that all save 43 of the people to graduate invested.

The program is without doubt the finest thing of the sort yet used at Nebraska. The cover is of mouse-colored limp leather decorated with a gun-metal seal of the University and stamped with the word Nebraska. The book contains a fine cut of University Hall as a frontpiece, then follow the commencement program, the list of the class officers, the class roll, divided according to schools, and lastly the list of the standing committees. It is well printed on high grade paper and altogether presents a most artistic appearance.

Clara Steven, '07, has been elected principal of the Friend high school.
