THE ELECTIVE SYSTEM.

The question of the elective system in college as the basis of the students' course is one over which school men have had a good many rounds of heated argument. It has its warm advocates and its decided opponents, each side maintaining its position for or against the system completely. What is a better solution than that found here at Nebraska?

In the University, the plan has been adopted, whereby the student must get more than a certain amount of required work, then he has a remainder to elect himself. This plan includes diploma. The prescribed course undoubtedly does them good.

There are some credits more easily obtained than others.

But to have a university curriculum entirely prescribed does an injustice to the one with real ambitions and definite plans for realizing them. He has little opportunity to follow his favorite subjects. Not that the student's eye ought to be fixed solely upon his after-graduation career, but he ought to have something definite in mind regarding that career. This does not happen to be a world simply of the abstract.

Consequently, that plan which includes the greater share of the advantages of both systems is to be most highly commended. Here is something at last which can be boosted, not "knocked at."

Arrangements are now being made so that the agricultural students will be able to take considerable more work at the State Farm than at present. This will be a great convenience to those who now make several trips a week and who drill at the University.

The article in the January issue of the University Studies on "The Influence of Credit upon the Level of Prices" by Mrs. England, has been highly praised by Dr. Arthur Hadley of Yale. He says he cannot accept the theory as yet, but will study it with pleasure.

the advantages of both the elective system and that which rigidly prescribes all work undertaken, tho, it is to be admitted, it does not obviate necessarily all the disadvantages attaching to both.

Unfortunately, there are some people of sufficient years and credits to obtain admittance into the University, who, nevertheless, have not attained judgment or real maturity enough to be able to tell what they want or desire intelligently their own intentions. Somebody else has always told them what to do; maybe if there is somebody, to take their little hand and gently guide their footsteps into a good road, they will grow up some day. In that case the University has a great achievement open to it. There are others, too, with an eye simply on the
