INDIFFERENCE?

In the shuffle down at the capitol recently, the University's plea for an athletic field went unheeded. At present, there is no prospect of obtaining a suitable field for athletics and they are, as a consequence, in danger. Yet nobody about the campus seems to have become the least disturbed over it. Whether this is a sign of mere forgetfulness or of indifference is hard to say. If a proof of the latter, it is time the attitude changed.

Nebraska has enjoyed for several years a reputation as a school well up in athletics. This reputation, and what is more, the results of the feature giving this reputation can not be sacrificed. When we lose our athletics we lose much of our individuality and a vital part of the school life. Tho athletics be viewed only as an accessory, as it has been insisted they should be, they nevertheless, give a tone to the college environment decidedly healthful. They infuse a special sort of energy and spirit into things; they round out the university experience to something complete.

More interest in the fate of athletics at Nebraska ought to be manifested. No immediate way out of the difficulty coming with the loss of the athletic field has yet appeared, but if the students and alumni once became thoroly concerned a way might be found. Anything but indifference!
