A PRACTICAL TALK.

Dr. Kent is Highly Appreciated by Engineers.

A large and enthusiastic audience of engineering students greeted Dr. Kent yesterday in Memorial Hall at 11 o'clock, when he gave his talk on "Steam Boiler Economy." His talk was an informal one and he entered into his subject with enthusiasm and as one of authority.

He pointed out the fact that in former years when fuel was cheap and it was not necessary to crowd boilers to their maximum capacity, little thought was given to economy in steam boilers and engineers gave slight consideration to fuel economy. These times have rapidly changed, and with the anti-smoke ordinances in the cities and the increasing cost of fuel, comes the necessity of solving the problem of maximum efficiency with minimum cost.

He then dwelt at length upon the several problems entering into the consideration of steam boiler economy and the factors which obtained in their solution and explained the many modern methods of bringing about the desired results. His talk was clear cut and concise and he held the attention of his audience thruout the entire program. Several engineering men from the city were present at the lecture by Dr. Kent, and expressed themselves as much pleased with his presentation of the subject.

At the close of the lecture, Dr. Kent was taken charge of by Professor Richards, who entertained him, together with the other professors of the University who are in the engineering department, at a luncheon at his home. In the afternoon he visited the different departments in the University in company with the engineering professors and Professor Losey of the English department, who is an old acquaintance of Dr. Kent. Last night he delivered his lecture on "Education for Life and for Life Work" in Memorial Hall at 8 o'clock.
