Returns From Trip.

E. E. Blackman of the Historical Society has returned from an exploring trip lasting several days. In the vicinity of Carlo, Nebraska, an Indian mound was recently discovered, and considerable interest being aroused, Mr. Blackman was urgently asked to come. Accompanied by three buggy-loads of people, he visited the mound, which lies on the summit of one of the highest hills, and excavated to a depth of about six feet. The result, however, was somewhat disappointing; it was found to be a lone burial, of comparatively recent date, probably 1872 or 1873. The bones, which are but fairly well preserved, are those of an Indian who probably died on a hunt, and one whom his companions buried at their evening camp without ever taking to the general burying ground.

A large mounted globe has been sent by Mr. Samuel Hill to the University in the care of the Chancellor for use in his lecture tomorrow evening.

Ed. Manning, prominent in University athletics a couple of years ago, was visiting among old friends on the campus yesterday. Mr. Manning has been working in Old Mexico.

The University Journal does not appear at the beginning of this month as usual, but will come out the twentieth, owing to the fact that the next and last issue of the semester is to be made an alumni number. This number will be edited by Irving S. Cutter, '98.

Yale sentiment is against Rhodes scholars competing for Oxford in the coming Yale-Harvard-Cambridge-Oxford meet. Professor Phelps has written Alkan M. Stephens, a former Yale athlete now at Oxford, asking him not to compete.
