GETTING UNBALANCED.

It seems there is always a certain class of those young men who take in the annual encampment of the University battalion who have the notion that, unless they do something that proves how deep they can "plunge," they are admitting themselves to be very quiet, harmless boys and quite without spirit. It is said that certain Beatrice citizens were very much opposed to the return of the encampment this year to that city and that several students from the town were sent to other schools rather than to the University simply because of the actions mentioned and do them with a deal more deftness than any University novice (at least, it is to be hoped the word novice can be used with that word in front of it.) It can be put down very certainly that none attain much proficiency along this line without descending into this red-nosed class.

A University cadet has no business to do in camp anything he would not be willing to do in his university or home life. And it is possible to relax, too, without getting overbalanced—or unbalanced.

The University of Minnesota received from the legislature this year more than $1,400,000 for all purposes. This includes $45,000 for the enlargement of the campus, $25,000 for engineering buildings, and an addition of $125,000 to the salary account. This has permitted the raising of salaries of heads of departments from $2,700 to $3,500 with corresponding increase for other positions. In addition, provision has been made for twenty-eight new appointments in the university.

Communication.

Editor Nebraskan:—

The Cornhusker does an unintentional injustice to H. M. Benedict, '96, in saying that he was not an athlete in any sense while in college. Everyone connected with the University during Benedict's college course will remember him as the star baseball player of that time. Two Eastern college men, both ball players, one a Harvard baseball coach, who happened to visit me and saw Benedict play in his last year, were enthusiastic over his work, declaring him to be the peer of any college ball player in the East at that time.

Several University people attended the meeting of the Nebraska Ornithological Union at Weeping Water last Saturday and Sunday. Among those present were Professor Bruner, Dr. R. H. Wolcott, A. E. Sheldon and Myron Swenk. The last named student, who is specializing in Ornithology, was elected president of the Union. Much of the time was spent in the woods, identifying the many birds of that region.

observed in the case of at least part of the cadets last year. That sort of conduct which brings disgrace to the University were best "cut out"—and quick.

Of course there are plenty who will maintain that a little of the "rapid" way will not hurt anybody and that the fellow who is so full of principles as to be unwilling to join in the sport is a very puny, lifeless sort of a character. However, there are two ways of looking at such things. It is barely possible that the fellow who is able to go thru straight is evincing really more square foundation than others. Any ordinary street bum can do all the "stunts" of this mercurial course

Stanford, Jr., University, have deposed the editor of the Sequoia, the monthly literary magazine, "for conduct of such periodical subversive, in the opinion of the committee, of the best interests of the student body and the university as a whole." The real cause of the removal of the editor seems to be that he wrote caustic editorials freely criticizing the actions of the faculty and the policy of the athletic management. The students are evenly divided over the affair.

Cornell students are considering seriously the idea of starting an "out-door gymnasium during the spring days.
