QUITTING TIME.

Today is the last time the Nebraskan will appear on the campus this year and it is the day when practically all the recitation work of the University is brought to a close. It is a day when students begin to feel that "quitting time" is drawing decidedly near.

Freshmen look forward to the time when they shall come back with the glory of a full year's experience to parade before the wondering eyes of next fall's crop of verdant innocents. Sophomores look forward to the time when they shall be fully entitled to the name of upper-classmen, and able and taking up the work of a life-time and while everyone looks with a certain momentary feeling of regret, back over the college course and at the necessity of giving it up, there is also an eagerness for the new program and new environment.

A college course flashes past in a mightily short time; it is here and then it isn't. The reason is perhaps, because it is overflowing with happenings, and further, because it is a very smooth and ideal sort of a course. More of its idealism ought to be carried out into the world. Let's carry it.

TAPPING.

A Custom Which is Observed at Yale Yearly.

There are three senior societies at Yale. They are the "Skull and Bones," the "Scroll and Keys," and the "Wolf's Head." The membership of each is limited to fifteen men.

The ceremonies at "tap day" took place Thursday afternoon at Yale University and were one of the most momentous events of the year at Yale. This is the day when the three senior societies appear on the campus and designate by a tapping process the juniors that they have chosen to become their members. Of so great importance of this event that many of the parents and relatives of the candidates were present to watch the tapping.

By a recent act of the Missouri legislature a tapping, which parents and relatives did not witness, has been prohibited within five miles of Columbia, Missouri, where the state university is situated.

Laws Object.

The Senior law students at Minnesota have protested against wearing caps and gowns at graduation. This conventional attire, they say, is effeminate and not becoming to men. President Northrup of the university says that he does not disapprove of their action, and that the only students who really get their money's worth out of the garments are the girls of the Academic department.

The Chinese students at Yale will give a play for the benefit of the famine sufferers in China.

to call themselves such without stretching the actualities of the case in the least; tho they may begin to feel, at the same time that a University course is not the long epoch of time thru which they had anticipated passing. Juniors heave a sigh of relief at thought that now the greater part of their work is done, and that now a year with an easy schedule and a time of especially pleasant class fellowship is approaching; tho the proximity of that cold world waiting there with but a couple of semesters in front of it may cause this and that one to catch his breath occasionally. Seniors have become inured for the most part to the thought of breaking away

Two rare copies of speeches by Stephen A. Douglas have been recently secured by the Historical Society Library. One is on "Popular Sovereignty in the Territories," and the other on "Kansas and the Dred Scott Decision."

Captain Trudgian, of Colorado's baseball team, had his skull fractured in a recent game by a hot liner striking him in the forehead. He will be out of the game the rest of the season.

Harvard students are raising money in the interests of the Peace Conference.

Carlisle is to have a new $20,000 hospital. The government appropriated the money.
