The opening of the football season of 1907 is at hand and this afternoon the initial game of the year on Nebraska Field will be played between the Cornhuskers and the fast eleven from the Peru State Normal. The game will be called at 3:30.

Nebraska makes her first appearance of the season of 1907 today with a line-up of the most encouraging and promising squads that she has ever had and her supporters feel the Cornhuskers are sure to be a winning bunch this fall. The contest this afternoon, while being no true test of the ability of the Nebraska men, will give every one of them a chance to show up at a good advantage and will bring out any star material on the squad.

It is the intention of Coach Cole to give a majority of the men on the squad a try-out today and any latent ability among the men will be likely to come out in this contest.

The Peru bunch is a likely looking eleven and if the "dope" is not away off they will spring several surprises on the Cornhuskers. They have one or two light fellows who are said to be regular Eckersalls in ground gaining.

In secret practice this week their men are said to have done some of the most sensational work with the forward pass every seen at Peru and the state normal coach is expecting them to score some points for Peru this afternoon.

On account of the rain yesterday afternoon the Cornhuskers were run through a light practice in the armory by "King" Cole, instead of being taken out on the gridiron. The work of the afternoon consisted of practice in throwing the ball, and in catching punts and forward passes.

CAMPUS CHANGES

IMPROVEMENTS THAT HAVE BEEN MADE AT NEBRASKA

New Walks Laid—Protecting Fences Erected—Observatory Moved—
New Y. M. C. A. Rooms.

It sometimes seems that the University of Nebraska is going forward very slowly, but each year, as the old students return new changes are found that make the institution seem better than ever, and indicate that, slowly but surely the University is forging ahead. One of the most noticeable changes this summer is the better appearance of our campus. Not only have new flower beds been planted but fences have been so placed that the old unsightly paths across the grass are no longer used. About several of the buildings cement walks have taken the place of the old board walks and many other improvements made on the grounds and buildings.

During the vacation months an engineering feat of more than ordinary importance was accomplished on the campus. It was found necessary to move the large and imposing astronomical observatory which used to be located near the new museum. After much consultation by several prominent authorities on engineering problems, a plan was devised whereby it was thought the structure might be safely and cheaply moved. A large force of men was at once put to work, and as a result the big building is now located near the new physics building. So carefully was the whole thing done that not even a mark remains to show where this work was accomplished.

The names of the different buildings have been placed over the doorways. This has proved a great help to the first classmen in getting acquainted, and is a great convenience to visitors on the campus.

The basement of the Administration building has been one of the busiest places on the campus during the last two weeks. The long lines of people buying books and subscribing to the Nebraskan have kept the hall crowded. The Nebraskan is now occupying the office that the Cornhusker occupied last year. The Cornhusker will occupy the office vacated by the Nebraskan.

During the summer the Y. M. C. A. moved to the east end of the basement of University hall. These quarters are merely temporary, as the Y. M. C. A. expects to have rooms in the new Temple. The old rooms have been fitted up for a geographical laboratory.

In honor of their son Earl, who is a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Foster entertained the members of that organization and their friends at a dancing party given at Fraternity hall last night. More than twenty members of the active chapter and about thirty alumni and other friends of the family attended.
