ITALY AT TODAY

CHANCELLOR TELLS OF ITALY'S RANK AS A NATION.

Says She Retains Her Ancient Intellectual Superiority In Spite of Many Difficulties.

The Chancellor was most enthusiastically received by a large crowd of students at Convocation yesterday. Three lusty cheers were given, when he arose to speak, and it was several minutes before he could be heard.

The Chancellor first spoke of the high standard of intellectual life in Italy today. In spite of the great difficulties through which Italy has passed, she still retains her ancient intellectual superiority, so that today Italy ranks as high as any country in the world, in this line. In many ways Italian universities are quite as successful as those of Germany and France. In literature and science they are equal to any others, and in art they are pre-eminent. The finest modern work in art which is being produced today, comes from Italy.

The political solidity of Italy today, is remarkable, in the face of the lack of such unity for centuries in the past. All Italy, from the north to the south seems to feel alike. The Italians almost worship Victor Emanuel, Cavour and Garibaldi. The cause of this unity can hardly be unity of race or unity of religion. It is probably in part caused by the love of Italians for their language and their art.

It is certain that separation of church and state in Italy will come in the near future. Most people in Italy feel the same toward the union of church and state that they do in France. The people are wonderfully well satisfied with their government. Even the most religious people rather favor the growth of political power.

The tension between Austria and Italy over a small piece of territory in the north is very great. War would have occurred long ago except for the character of the Austrian emperor. His personality is remarkable. The people in the disputed territory are strongly Italian, but their love for the Austrian emperor makes them willing to live under his rule. The Italians, to use a little slang, seem to "have it in" for the Austrians, and there seems to be a general feeling, that on the death of the present emperor Italy will get this territory by some means.

The Zoological Club will meet at 8:30, 1907, in the Zoological lecture room. The program is as follows: Report of work of last year and during the summer. The South Harpswell Laboratory, Professor Barker; Amblystoma in Western Nebraska, Professor Powers; Studies on Water Mites, Dr. Ruth Marshall; The Seventh International Zoological Congress, Professor Ward. Visitors cordially welcome to the meeting.

"Art" Fenlon, 1907, is located on a homestead at Texaline, Texas.

FOR NEBRASKA.

Strong Interest Expressed By C. C. McWilliams.

The following letter written to the Daily Nebraskan by C. C. McWilliams, 1907, who is now located at Wilkensburg, Pa., shows how the old "Uni." spirit lives with some of Nebraska's valuable "grads." The letter Wilkensburg, Pa., Sept. 28, 1907.

Daily Nebraskan:

The first "Rag" came yesterday and it certainly is good to read Uni news again, for, although a long way from the cherished nooks, 'the golden haze of student days is 'round about us yet.' There are about two hundred college men here with the Westinghouse company and we are constantly mingling with men from Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Cornell, etc., but none seem to have nearly so much loyalty and love for their old Alma Mater as our little colony of twenty-one Nebraskans.

The editorial on "organized rooting" in the issue of the twenty-fifth appeals to me very strongly and I hope that this afternoon, at the first game of the season, a large number of "rooters" will turn out to show their appreciation and lung capacity. True, this is only a practice game and perhaps we don't need to "root," but we must have practice games to make a winning team—in fact any team at all—and if the team needs practice how about the "rooters"? Get out to practice games and practice with the team, and if you cannot get thoroughly organized in this way get out and practice with the team every evening.

As was suggested, it is not so much in the volume of "noise" as it is in even, clear, distinct yells. Give the right yell at the right time and get together so that the team can tell what you are saying and it will help immensely.

MAKE A CHANGE.

Present Convocation Plan to Be Abandoned.

At a meeting of the Convocation committee Tuesday, October 1, it was decided to return to the former plan of holding Convocations from 11:00 to 11:30 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, instead of Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

The old plan was abandoned at the beginning of the second semester of 1906-1907 at the request of faculty members in the hope of affording to all students the full noon hour for luncheon.

So many difficulties, however, are in the way of a complete execution of this plan that all interests concerned are best served by return to the traditional program. The change will be effected Monday, October 7.

FOOTBALL GOSSIP.

Practice Held At State Farm Yesterday.

The Cornhusker eleven was taken out to the State Farm yesterday afternoon, where they were run thru a hard practice by "King" Cole. Practice on the gridiron at the University was prevented by the muddy condition of the field.

A. F. Beekley, sub full-back on the 1905 team returned to school and was out yesterday. Beekley is a husky looking fellow and Coach Cole expects him to "do some things."

The following men were sent to the training table this morning: Collins, Minor, Kroger, Burnett, and Frum.

Helen Huse, 1907 and member of Alpha Phi sorority is teaching physical education in the Pullman, Washington Agriculture School.

Professor Aylsworth will not meet his classes today.

OUR OPPONENTS

KANSAS AND MINNESOTA FOOTBALL TEAMS AT WORK.

Gophers Are Holding Secret Practice and Jayhawkers Are Getting Old Men Into Game.

While "King" Cole is doing "great" work with the Cornhusker squad, Nebraska's chief opponents of the season—Minnesota and Kansas—are busy rounding into shape for the big games on their schedule. The following reports from the two schools show what they are doing:

University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Sept. 30.—The big Iron gates on Northrop field swung shut with a clash one day last week, canvas was stretched across the openings, and the bunch of huskies who are to represent Minnesota on the gridiron this fall, went into retirement even from the eyes of their most devoted admirers. They will not emerge until the game with Ames, two weeks hence. Dr. Williams will at once begin instructing his men in the little fancy stunts which will not be brought out until the big games of the season.

"I can't say very much about the team as yet," said "Doc" the other day. The men are all green and inexperienced. It will be lighter, probably, than last year. We will know absolutely nothing about the line-up until about two weeks from now."

From now on only the barest rumors will be obtainable as to the work of the bunch and until the try-out with Ames the loyal Minnesota supporters will have no chance to see their favorites at work.

Woodrick has been kept on left end steadily since work began and it begins to look as if his chances for holding down Bobby Marshall's berth were very good. In the backfield Chestnut is passing with a coolness and speed which has won him considerable praise. It will probably be Capron and Schuknect at the halves. Whether Rademacher can stay in the fullback position with only 160 pounds to back him up looks rather problematical.

University of Kansas, Lawrence, Sept. 30.—Sixty men have been reporting for practice every evening and by the last of the week when the class teams have become fully organized the squad will probably approach the 100 mark. Practically all the veterans who will play this fall have already donned the moleskins. "Tub" Reed, Julius Cohn, Billy Rice and "Red" Coulter being the only "old heads" missing. Tub is having trouble with the eligibility committee again and may not join the team this season, although there is still hope of his massive 225 pounds filling the left guard berth again. Billy Rice has been suffering from an attack of malaria and will not get into the game until next week.
