Nebraskan at Columbia.

Mr. A. E. Sheldon, A. B. '02, A. M., '04, librarian of the state historical society, who is attending Columbia University and doing work for his doctor's degree writes Professor Caldwell in substance as follows:

His curriculum includes two courses in seminar sociology under Prof. Giddings, two courses in anthropology under Prof. Bolas, one course in political economy under Prof. Sellman and one course in international law under Dr. Moore and he is also attending a course of lectures given on German Social Legislature under Dr. Leonhart, the Kaiser Wilhelm professor secured in the international exchanging of professors last year.

Mr. Sheldon says that in the Columbia Graduate School there are eight hundred and sixty-five candidates and out of these thirty-five men and forty-four women are candidates for Ph. Ds.

Dean Ward will not be able to address the medical society as announced, on account of the serious illness of Mrs. Ward, and hence the meeting of the society will be postponed.

Classes in Botany 1 have at last reached the flood water mark. Two hundred students have registered for the course to date. This is an increase of more than eighty per cent over the attendance of last year.
