REGENT CANDIDATES.

Anderson and Coupland Speak at Convocation.

University students had the pleasure of hearing the two republican candidates for regent yesterday morning at chapel. Regent Anderson, who was appointed to fill part of a term by Governor Sheldon, and Mr. Coupland, both spoke for a few minutes.

Regent Anderson outlined the wonderful growth of Nebraska in the past fifty years. He declared that Irving once described the West as a place where no man lived for a very long period of time. It was not more than fifty years ago that people thought of the West as a desert. The growth in population in this time has been remarkable. Not more than forty years ago the first mile of railroad track was laid in Nebraska. Now we have 6,000 miles of railroads. In 1866 valuation of real and personal property was $1,705,918, while today Nebraska's property is valued at $1,650,000,000 at least.

The public schools have been identified with the entire growth of Nebraska, and the University today stands very high in the estimation of all Nebraskans. Education is the most valuable asset which anybody can have, for it is always worth par value.

Mr. Coupland then spoke for a few minutes. He declared that he was a representative of the agricultural interests of the state, and that he could speak with assurance of the attitude of the people of the state regarding the University. He declared that it was one of love, especially among the more intelligent classes, and that they desired to see the University of the very highest type.

The material value of the University has proved to be of much greater value than the money actually expended. The University stands for culture which is one of the things that Nebraska most needs at the present time. Too high an estimate cannot be placed on the work of the professors and instructors. It is unselfish and comes from the highest motives.

Mr. Coupland declared that in recent years there had been a notable growth of the idea that civic virtue is of primary importance. The political body is becoming more unified and each person is learning that he has a work to do. Men are beginning to realize that they are their brothers. The primary purpose of the University of Nebraska is to make citizens.

NEW SERVICE.

Automatic Device for Ringing Bells Installed.

The observatory clock has been equipped with a new program apparatus for ringing the bells in the several buildings. The old program apparatus was designed some years ago by Prof. Sweezy, but was intended to operate one program only; that is, to ring the bells alike each day of the week. Now that the convocation exercises occur Tuesday and Thursday only, the class hours are somewhat different than those of the other days. The new device automatically changes the program from day to day, and also cuts out the bells during the night and on Saturday and Sunday. It has worked perfectly from the start, although there has been some trouble with the wiring for some of the buildings.
