CHAPEL PERIOD.

It has been decided that there will be no football rally for the Denver game, but all spirit and enthusiasm will be reserved for one grand final rally for the St. Louis game, Thanks giving. The reason for this attitude is that it was feared that too many rallies would by becoming a burden on the students generally, on account of their frequency tend to defeat the object sought. Without doubt under the present arrangements of the convocation period and lecture period it is not possible to secure any time during the day for these rallies which will not conflict with lectures and other required attendance. So far in the year it has been necessary for the students to choose between attending the rally or their classes and no matter which course they pursue there is a wrong done. Many feel that the students are put in the wrong position inasmuch as a spirit of loyalty demands attendance upon Wolverines Still Talking About Leaving Big Nine.

Michigan is still extensively discussing its perplexing athletic problem. The attitude toward the Big Nine is still the essential feature of the controversy, and the recent action of the Board of Regents reorganizing the Board of Athletic Control has added fuel to the fire. The Michigan Daily comments as follows on the subject:

"By a process of deduction it is quite possible to see how the action will tend toward the estrangement of Michigan from the Conference alliance. The Regents have always been opposed to the hitherto effective policy of allowing eight other schools to dictate Michigan's athletic affairs, and as it is the Regents who are responsible for Michigan's latest move, it does not seem unnatural to connect the two conditions.

"According to the plan outlined by the Board of Regents for the new Board of Control, but one of the future members is definitely chosen at this time, and that is Keene Fitzpatrick. As usual, Mr. Fitzpatrick is pursuing a policy of conservatism and is expressing no opinions concerning the probable attitude the new board will have toward the Big Nine. However, it is known that Director Fitzpatrick was passively in favor of the movement started last spring, which had for its ultimate object the complete severance by Michigan of all athletic relations with other institutions of the Big Nine, as members of the Nine. Relations with those schools individually, of course, would have been acceptable had those schools wished to maintain such athletic intercourse.

As the matter now stands—that is, under the regime of the present Board of Control—Michigan is still a member of the Big Nine. Despite the the rallies and the interest in their college work as well as the requirements of the University demand attendance upon these 11:30 classes. As the case now stands there is no time provided for the different class and student meetings which does not conflict with regular lecture periods. There should be a certain period of time set apart each day at which time meetings could be held without cutting into regular University time. It would not be necessary for one half hour to be given every day if it is found that so much time is not necessary to enable class and other student organizations to meet and transact their necessary business. But without question there is something wrong.

Think of a college professor saying anything like this: "I hope that the best team will win." "What an awful slam! Doesn't he know he know he should say: "I hope the better team will win?"

numerous threats that were made by that institution last spring when Michigan's Board of Control decided to violate to a slight extent several Conference rulings, the Big Nine has since maintained vigorously that Michigan's action did not result in the Wolverines forfeiting their membership in the Big Nine. The stand the directors of the Conference took on the matter was a purely selfish one, and was doubtless adopted after considerable consideration. They were led to their decision that no matter what action Michigan might take, she would still be a member, by the knowledge that Michigan's withdrawal—in name as well as in deed—would prove a dangerous if not fatal blow to the prestige enjoyed by the Big Nine Conference association. Hence the ruling that even though not active or in good standing, Michigan was nevertheless, and would always be, in spite of any action she might take, a member of the Big Nine."

OVERCOATS
WITH MORE THAN ORDINARY MERIT

We are now squarely face to face with real winter. The first impulse will be to rush into the most convenient place for an Overcoat. Don't do it—take time to get the coat you want—one that you are sure you can depend upon for service. Our Coats at $15 and up are not simply here to sell, but to make customers for our store, for the fabrics and the style of every coat is thoroughly dependable. Our contention is, that Coats should not only look good while new, but continue to look well with hard usage. Both knee and ankle length Coats at $10 and up to $40 and every one fully guaranteed to give satisfactory service for the price paid.
