The last game of intercollegiate football on Nebraska Field will be played at three p. m., today, when the Cornhuskers meet the Doane eleven. This is the final home contest on the Cornhusker schedule. Thanksgiving they will close the season of 1907 at St. Louis. Next year the football warriors of Nebraska will struggle on some other grounds than the present lot, called Nebraska Field, for next spring the erection of an engineering building will be begun on the macadamized gridiron and the Cornhusker athletes will be forced to find another site for their contests.

Considerable interest attaches to the game today, not because the result is in doubt, but owing to the fact that it is the last chance the local rooters will have of seeing Captain John Weller of the Cornhuskers in action. Weller's college football career will end with this season and he will not appear before the Nebraska students again. He has made a fine record at the head of the team this year and the students are going to turn out this afternoon to witness his passing.

Doane is not regarded as a formidable opponent by the Cornhuskers and King Cole will attempt to use some of his new plays so that they may be perfected before the St. Louis game. The regular team will line up against Doane in the first half and the scrubs will probably play the second half.

The Nebraska eleven will leave for St. Louis Tuesday afternoon over the Rock Island. They will go via Omaha where the Wabash will be taken to St. Louis. While in the Mound City the Cornhuskers will stay at the Jefferson hotel. The team will be accompanied by Coach Cole, Manager Eager, Dr. Everett, Dr. Lees and a representative of the Daily Nebraskan.

Souvenir Football Number of Nebraska a Winner.

The next issue of the Daily Nebraskan will be a large Souvenir Football Number, containing about thirty-five half-tone illustrations and many feature articles on football.

The "big" article that promises to produce the greatest sensation in college journalism of recent years is "The Forward Pass," which was written especially for the Daily Nebraskan by Walter H. Eckersall, the Football Editor of the Chicago Tribune and the famous ex-quarterback of the Chicago football team.

There is no man in the country today, with the possible exception of Walter Camp, who is better qualified to discuss any phase of football than is Mr. Eckersall. For four years he was a member of the University of Chicago football team and during the last two years of his football career he was on the Maroon eleven he was recognized as the greatest quarterback in the world and was given that position on the All-American eleven in 1906. This fall he has been writing football news for the Chicago Tribune and his articles have been attracting considerable attention over the country.

A list of several of the articles follows: "The Spirit of Football," "The New Football," "The Scrubs," "A Review of the Season," and "The Season."

Included in the list of contributors are Chancellor Andrews, "King" Cole, Herbert Peck, Dr. Bolton, Professor Ayers, Captain Workizer, and Fred Cornell.

PLEDGING TIME.

Freshmen May Be Invited to Join Frats Today.

This is pledging day for the fraternities. After noon today they will be permitted to ask Freshmen to become members of their society.

The rules of the interfraternity Council forbid pledging until the Saturday before Thanksgiving and then only those Freshmen who have passed all the mid-semester examinations successfully are allowed to be pledged.

The "frat" men of the University have been under a great strain during the last two months in entertaining prospective pledges and the majority of them say they are glad the "rushing" business ends today.

Students Will See Team Off to St. Louis Tuesday.

A big rally is being planned for Tuesday afternoon at the Rock Island depot. The football team will leave for St. Louis at 2:40 o'clock that afternoon and the students are going to be present at the hour of departure to show the Cornhuskers that the Nebraska spirit wants them to beat Cochem's professionals Thanksgiving.

The band will be out and arrangements are being made to have the students form in line at the University and march down "O" street to the depot.

Two o'clock classes will probably be dismissed Tuesday afternoon.

SUNDAY MEETINGS.

Y. W. C. A. Associations of City Will Hold Services.

Owing to the fact that for some time the need has been felt of an opportunity for the young women of the city to meet together in a Sunday service, the City and the University Young Women's Christian Associations will unite in holding a mass meeting for all young women on Sunday afternoon at four o'clock in the Lyric theater. These meetings will be held regularly throughout the winter, the first to be held November 24th, at which Dr. R. F. Roach, of the First Methodist church, will address the young women. Arrangements have also been made for several musical numbers to be rendered by Mr. Carl Steckelberg, the violinist, and Mrs. Lillian Dobbs Helms, soloist.

The value of these meetings cannot be too highly appreciated when it is considered how large has been the success and popularity of similar ones held by the Young Men's Christian Association. They will give the young women an opportunity to come in touch with each other and to form a real bond of union, uniting them both religiously and socially. Although it will not be possible at first for the two associations to obtain celebrated speakers, owing to the present lack of funds, yet the meetings will be made interesting and helpful through the efforts of the best known men and women of our city.

MISTAKEN IDEAS

PROFESSOR SAYS SCHOLARSHIPS ARE A GOOD THING.

Richard F. Scholz of Wisconsin, a Former Roades Scholar, Defends the Great Dreamer's Idea.

"Most people are mistaken about the Roades idea," said Richard F. Scholz of Wisconsin in a recent lecture on "Oxford and the Roades Scholarship" before the International Club Saturday night. "One prominent educator has gone as far as to contend that anyone accepting such a scholarship should be deprived of citizenship. Others have looked upon the Rhodes scheme as a chimera, as an impracticable dream. Yet there are at Oxford today 160 scholars from every part of the globe, from the British colonies, from America, and from Germany, every one of whom firmly believe in the Roades idea."

The lecturer went on to show that Cecil Roades has been much misunderstood.

"Roades," he said, "like all great men, has been much misunderstood. The keynote to his character was not the love of money and of power for its own sake; it was the loyalty to an idea and to an ideal. He regarded money as a means, as a power which makes possible the realization of his idea. While roughing it in South Africa when he was but twenty-four years old, he wrote down a "Draft of My Ideas," giving as his aim and purpose in life the furtherance of the British empire, the bringing of the whole civilized world under British rule, the recovery of the United States, and the making of the Anglo Saxon race but one empire. But his idea grew from the narrower imperialism of empire based on British ascendancy to an imperialism of race—the unit of all English-speaking peoples—and in 1901, as is evidenced by a codicil to his last will and testament, this too finally submitted to the idea of international peace."

The reason why scholarships were offered to Americans, and why, as soon as the emperor made English in the German schools compulsory, similar scholarships were offered to German students, appears from the words of Cecil Roades, "The object is that an understanding between the three great powers will render war impossible and educational relations make the strongest tie."

The endowment of ten million dollars provides for 78 scholarships for the colonies, 15 for Germany, and 96 for the United States, that is, more than one-half are awarded to the United States.

In speaking of the method of selecting Roades men, Professor Scholz said, "Here, too, there are many mistaken notions. Above all things, the trustees of the Roades fund are against any rotation scheme. The scholarship is by no means to be passed from one college in a state to another, but in every case the best men from all colleges are to win out. Moreover, the examination is not competitive, but simply qualifying."

The football team will go to St. Louis via the Wabash railroad. If you want to go with the team, apply to Manager Eager for tickets. For general information apply to Harry Moores, G. P. T. A., at Omaha. The team leaves Tuesday at 2:40 p. m. via C. R. I. to Omaha, and then over the Wabash railroad to St. Louis, leaving Omaha at 6:30 p. m.

Do not forget the date of the Cornhusker banquet. It is December 14th.
