PLAY FOOTBALL WITH MICHIGAN?

NEBRASKA MAY MEET WOLVERINES ON GRIDIRON.

Michigan Has Withdrawn From Big Nine and Will Look to Nebraska For a Game for Next Fall.

That Nebraska will meet Michigan on the gridiron next fall and that the game will be played in Lincoln seem probable since the decision of the Wolverines board of control on Monday, to withdraw from the Big Nine Conference.

Several weeks ago, when it was known that Michigan was seriously considering the withdrawal from the Conference the Nebraska management made the Wolverines an offer for a game, contingent on Michigan's severing relations with the other Big Nine schools. At that time the Wolverine management looked upon the proposition with much favor and told the Nebraska management that it would be accepted in case of Michigan's withdrawal.

Now that the Wolverines have taken final action and "cut loose" from the conference, the Nebraska management is expecting to receive word from Ann Arbor that will soon result in an agreement between the Cornhuskers and Wolverines for a great football game.

It is understood that the proposition offered to Michigan carried a clause that in case it is accepted by the Wolverines, will result in the game being played at Lincoln next fall. A game between Michigan and Nebraska at Lincoln would be the biggest athletic event that has been pulled off west of the Missouri since 1901, when the Wolverines journeyed to California for a game on New Year's day and undoubtedly would attract much interest.

The Conference schools will now begin to look around for some games and it is believed that they will make Nebraska several good offers. They have not scheduled any games, for they have been waiting to see what action Michigan would take. Three or four of the larger schools had planned on securing a game with the Wolverines and now they will have to look to the West. And the biggest and best thing on the western horizon is Nebraska. The Cornhusker management feels sure that some good proposition will be coming to Lincoln in the near future. Wisconsin has been communicating with Manager Eager regarding a game which may be arranged to take place at Madison next fall. Since severing athletic relations with Ames last week, Iowa has been extensively advertising that Nebraska would be placed on the Hawkeye schedule in place of the Aggies. The Nebraska management, however, has heard nothing about a game with Iowa.

MR. BRYAN.

Great Commoner Late In Arriving at Sunday Meeting.

Although it seemed for a time that a disappointed crowd would be turned away from the women's meeting last Sunday afternoon, because of the non-arrival of the speaker, namely W. J. Bryan, yet after all, things turned out beautifully for the waiting audience was treated to a most delightful impromptu musical program and Mr. Bryan appeared to redeem himself at just the crucial moment.

It seems that through an error on his part, Mr. Bryan was not aware that he was to address five hundred or more women on Sunday afternoon in the Lyric theater. The crowd which gathered to hear him was unusually large, consisting also of quite a number of men. At the opening of the services by Mrs. Hinman, the speaker had not yet arrived, but a musical program which had been arranged for, was given to fill the time until Mr. Bryan should put in his appearance.

Although coming late, Mr. Bryan's address was well worth waiting for. He spoke upon the subject of "Suggestions to Those Who Are Trying to Present Christianity to Others." and proved to be very helpful as well as a very eloquent address. In mentioning the Darwinian theory, Mr. Bryan said he did not accept that theory insofar as it did not uphold the creation of man by a divine being. Although he believed in the theory to a certain extent, himself, he also believed that many people accepted it without a complete knowledge of facts and were consequently led into disaster. He ended by paying a high tribute to the Christian religion and showed that only through acceptance of the gospel of truth as preached by Christ could men and women, and ultimately the world, reach the highest and truest standard of life.

GIRLS' BASKET BALL.

The Inter-Class Tournament Will Be Held February 7.

It has been definitely decided to hold the girls inter-class basket ball tournament for the possession of the pennant, on Friday, February, 7, from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. An admission fee of ten cents will be charged. No first team will be organized until after the tournament.

Not all of the class teams have been selected as yet. The senior team, which is expected to make a strong fight for the pennant is composed of Mossie Kimmel, Nell Bridenbaugh, forwards; Nell Stevenson, center; Mary Brown, Cella Foster, guards, and Armanda Anderson, Florence Tillotson, substitutes. The seven players making up the Freshmen team are Eva Barger, Jessie Beghtol, Cora Brown, Janet Cameron, Beulah Rader, Hattie Rollings, Mabel Wilson. Their positions have not yet been determined. Over and above these seven are enough strong freshmen to make a second team almost as good, so rich is this year's freshmen class in basket ball material.

The pennant is held at present by the Juniors, but three strong junior players will not be in the field this year, namely, Annie Watt, Isabel Wolfe, and Mattie Woodworth. The Junior team is reinforced, however, by the presence of Miss Ringvold, who played on the first team at Smith College, and several of last year's players will be on hand, notably Clara Hermonsen, Eleanor Barbour, and Lorraine Hempel. It is thought that the Juniors ought to make a good showing, although up to the present time they have done very little practicing. The Sophomore team has been the slowest of all to organize and the personnel of the team is still very uncertain.

It is the purpose this year to secure several outside games for the first team, when the latter is organized. In all probability these will take place in March and April.

COLLINS GUILTY OF VIOLENCE

CADET CORPORAL CONVICTED OF STRIKING A PRIVATE.

Court Martial Finds Cadet Officer Guilty On Two Charges of Violent Conduct Toward Subordinate.

"The sentence, though inadequate, is approved. * * * * *

"Corporal Collins is reminded that military authority must be exercised with kindness and justice and that he is forbidden to injure those under his authority by tyrannical or capricious conduct or by abusive language. His action in attacking a smaller man whose power of resistance was lessened by his peculiar position in the Battalion must be characterized as mean. By giving way to an outburst of temper under such conditions, Corporal Collins has shown himself unfit to command others."

Captain Workizer.

Cadet Corporal C. H. Collins, Company "C," of the University Cadets was found guilty by the court-martial convened at Lincoln, December, 5, 1907, of striking Cadet Private Sam Westerfield and of using abusive language to him without provocation. The finding of the court-martial was given out for publication yesterday. The charge against Corporal Collins was "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline," to which he pleaded not guilty.

The offense of which Collins was found guilty was committed at drill on Thursday, November 12, 1907. Cadet Westerfield is said to have been obeying orders in rank but Corporal Collins thought he was too slow and began abusing him with violent language. Westerfield objected to this, whereupon Collins struck him with his fists. The two then engaged in a fight until separated. Complaint was filed against Collins by Private Westerfield. To consider the complaint, the commandant convened a court martial for December 5, 1907. On that date the body of officers met and tried the case of Collins. The findings of the court-martial and the comment of the commandant are given in the following orders:

Headquarters University Cadets, Lincoln, Nebraska, Jan. 13, 1908.
