AN IMPROVEMENT.

Whether or not the new system of registration proposed for next year will be permanently adopted remains to be seen. It is in answer to a long felt difficulty, incident to the elective system. No student is at present permitted to register in his freshman year without some help and the advice of a Dean can take into account little of the individual needs of the student. The proposed plan of issuing schedules to students requesting them by letter during the summer is excellent. A new student can then have time and the necessary information to enable him to plan his course with the help of older students.

A plan of the manner in which a student is to devote his time for a

This is especially common among the men. A dozen or more of them can be seen at any time or day ranged about the magazine table. There they sit, idly thumbing empty magazine covers and looking across the room for a "man" whom they never find or at least never cease to look for.

A recent article in the Outlook calls attention to the many changes in entrance requirements of the universities and colleges of the country since the institution of the College Foundation meeting of which Chancellor Andrews attended during the holidays. There is a provision in connection with these pensions that limits them to teachers in institutions having entrance requirements the equivalent of those of state institutions. The effect of this stipulation has been to raise the standards in many small schools. Another provision worthy of note is the limitation of pensions to professors in non-sectarian schools. A half dozen or more small colleges for one reason or another allying themselves with some religious denomination have thus been obliged to state their exact position in this matter and the majority of them have declared themselves non-sectarian.

To the Editor of the Nebraskan—

I am a student who wish to take exception to the letter published in yesterday's Nebraskan. Its reference to "young ruffians" to "students raising hell instead of grades" show a deplorable lack of knowledge of the true state of affairs at this institution.

The facts of the case are that the average college student is if anything less addicted to rowdiness than the average young American of his age in other walks of life. The pranks played by college students are far more innocuous than the methods by which half year is worthy of a careful study and consideration. A happy thought or a good piece of advice while making out one's schedule saves many hours and trouble and worry after the semester is begun. Only those who entered before the present advisory system was in force can appreciate the help which students can get under the new plan not only from members of the faculty, who know the requirements of the school, but also from their parents and friends who know the requirements of the student.

A number of students have found fault with the Junior Prom bulletin in Nebraska Hall; the shape of the vase doesn't suit them. For the benefit of such it may be explained that the drawing is two faced. These bulletins are among the most attractive features of our college halls and this one is particularly attractive.

Speaking of the difficulty of studying in the library, another bad practice among a few students comes to mind. There seems to be an idea among students that the place to go when you are through work is to the Library.

the young men of our small country towns obtain amusement. The latter statement shows a deplorable misunderstanding of the nature of the work done at this school. It overlooks the study, the manly men and womanly women who prepare themselves for a useful life work here, the fact, above all others, that not the least efficient of our citizens are men to whom college pranks are a matter of personal experience.

While not feeling called upon to give an opinion on the right or wrong of the Chancellor's action, I hereby challenge the assumption of our friend out in the state that his decision implies any exceptional state of moral turpitude on the part of those concerned in the affair.

Yours truly,
STUDENT.
