Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second-class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Politics is a thing of the past for the class of '08. The election of President Menefee decides the last contest for the final honors of this class, a contest unequalled in interest by any previous election in its history. There is one thing about these contests which it is hoped will be continued by the participants in after years, and that is the friendliness of the contest. Each of the leading candidates have a host of friends and many students are common friends of both; no money was spent in purchasing votes and the worst charge made against either candidate was that he "couldn't be imagined as participating in a class scrap."

together. The evening is spent in casting stealthy glances at the fair one who, unless the couple is "married," sits at some desk a convenient distance from her admirer. About nine o'clock, the work of the evening being over, the excitement begins. The man usually thinks of something important he has forgotten to tell his lady love, so he takes a short rest from his labors and goes over and tells her about it. An understanding is usually reached before the matter reaches the attention of the librarian. The man then resumes his studies. In a few minutes the girl prepares to depart and is followed shortly by the man. The story is an old one, familiar to every frequenter of the Library. It is, to say the least, a childish habit, but of far more importance than this, it probably contributes to the flunk we are hearing so much about these days.

Only a short time remains before the Cornhusker comes out. Some of the individuals or organizations who put off the matter of getting pictures taken will feel slighted, but the book comes out May 1 and things will have to be put into shape very soon.

Dropped Out.

Elmer Thompson, Cornell's big football guard, has been dropped from the Cornell college of law on account of deficiency in study, and will be unable to play for Cornell again.

He was let out after failing to pass last week. His case was carefully considered by the faculty on his petition, but they refused to reopen it.

Under the rules he never will be allowed to play football for Cornell again.

Yale's greatest social event of the year, the "Junior Prom," was held last

At Syracuse University the Freshmen and Sophomores have an annual "spow rush," in which the opposite classes gather on opposite sides of a walk and at a given signal commence wrestling on the walk in an effort to make their way across. The class which succeeds and maintains its position for fifteen minutes is awarded the rush. The rush this year was held the first part of this week.

class meeting yesterday morning favoring interclass athletic contests at the State Farm on the afternoon of Ivy Day is excellent. Nebraska has very few established customs of this nature. Other schools younger than our institution have many such occasions and out of them grows a college spirit that makes strong and loyal alumni.

Mr. La Follette is said to have been a poor student from the standpoint of marks, but no one denies that as soon as the world at large began to grade him his standing went up rapidly. The Wisconsin University nearly refused to graduate him, but when the sterling honesty and worthy purposes of the young man are known his Alma Mater is proud to own him. Brilliance in class recitation is little sign of future success.

Old habits are hard to break. The custom of meeting at the postoffice or at church when children is being continued by a number of men and women in the University who come to the Library every evening with no other obvious purpose than to go home

Tuesday night in the armory at New Haven. Governor Woodruff of Connecticut, who is an honorary member of the Yale corporation, with the members of his staff, occupied one of the handsomely decorated boxes. Many New York society people were present.

Ralph E. Weaverling, former president of the Freshman class, who was indefinitely suspended as a result of the McDonald kidnapping case, has gone to his home in Beatrice. He has practically given up hope of re-entering the University in the near future.

It is reported that according to a recent decision of the faculty council the Dartmouth College football team will not be allowed to come to Michigan for a game with the Wolverine team next season.

Harvard University has received a gift of two thousand acres of valuable timber land near Petersham, Mass., for the use of the forestry department. Forestry students will do a large part of their work at Petersham, where they will have an opportunity for practical forestry.
