Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second-class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Mr. Bixby of the State Journal asks what we would think of a Lincoln statue to be placed on the University campus. It would be an unwise plan. Precedent is opposed to placing anything so artistic or even of respectable design on the campus. The idea is to improve but never to beautify. Perhaps someday when all the homely plans are exhausted as well as the money of the state the campus will be removed to some distant spot unmarred by the proximity to the present cheap and varied crowd of buildings.

A pleasant little game of tag was indulged in by about a dozen men in the hall of the Library the other day.

appeal from them ought to have some weight with the voters of the city. Of course there are few students who can legally vote in Lincoln altho in past elections a goodly number have been induced by party managers to give their residence wrongly. A student registering in the University from out in the state ought not to vote in Lincoln but his influence and work might count for something in a prohibition contest.

The part that is to be played by the college-bred man in the future is already being evidenced in many lines of business. The field superintendent of a large life insurance company that has an office in this city recently remarked that in the last three years the position of his company towards college men had entirely changed. They have adopted the policy of substituting a few men with good training for the old list of "experienced" agents. Accordingly Yale, Pennsylvania, Michigan, and Wisconsin have introduced courses in life insurance including courses in business law and contracts. A number of correspondence schools have also undertaken to instruct young men in the theory of the business. The result is that a large per cent of the employes of the insurance companies are now men who have gained a valuable foundation for the practical side of the work in some degree-granting college or University. Maybe the "practical" man will quit sneering after while at his successor, the "expert."

Seniors Attention.

Positively the last order of pins will be taken this week and next. Those who still desire pins should get a hustle on themselves and see me at once. Will be in the physiological botany laboratory, Nebraska

HALLETT, Jeweler, 1143 O Street

Every fellow that came up the inside stairway from the basement was promptly pushed from one side of the hall to the other and back until he reached the inner door. As soon as a man was tagged he considered himself "it" and added his efforts to make the journey down the line pleasant for the next visitor. The sport was interrupted by Dr. Jewett.

The men who were delegates to the Y. M. C. A. convention at Norfolk last week have returned and the latest reports state that several of them have been sick ever since. The soda fountains of that city must have been open. You can't tell what boys will do when they get away from home. They say that the convention was the most successful yet held in this state.

It is prophesied by many that the next election will put the city of Lincoln on the dry list. That would be a great thing for the University and the Prohibition forces ought to find some good assistance among the students. There is a large class of these willing and eager to do what they can to help the good cause along and an
