Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second-class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Booker T. Washington, in his recent address before the Tuskegee Conference, argued that "academic culture must be wed with work." That is good advice for black or white and ought to be remembered by those affected by spring fever.

The Michigan men are provided with a smoking room adjacent to the study room. A Columbia professor comes forward with the proof to show that smoking is a good thing for the students. Undoubtedly such investigations are popular and there ought to be no trouble in getting data for them.

It take to create enough sentiment to realize universal peace. The next generation ought to accomplish a large part of the task.

FORESTRY DEPARTMENT.

A circular entitled, "What Forestry Has Done," just published by the Forest Service, and obtainable upon application to the forester, Washington, D. C., reviews the forest work of the leading foreign countries. The chief lessons which may be learned from them are summarized as follows: What forestry has done in other countries shows first of all, that forestry pays, and that it pays best where the most money is expended in applying it. The United States is enormously behindhand in its expenditure for the management of the National Forests, but nevertheless returns have already increased with increased expenditure for management.

A second lesson, clearly brought home by foreign forestry, is the need of timely action, since forest waste can be repaired only at great cost.

Third, private initiative does not suffice by itself to prevent wasteful forest use. England, it is true, has so far consistently followed a let-alone policy. However, England has been depending upon foreign supplies of wood. Now that all Europe is running behind every year in the production of wood (2,620,000 tons), and there are unmistakable signs that countries which lead as exporters of wood will have to curtail their wood exports, England is at last feeling her dependence and is speculating uneasily as to where she can certainly secure what wood she needs in the future.

Fourth, when the forest countries are compared as to wood imports and exports, and when it is realized that a number of the countries which prac-

The editor of Life thinks that the results obtained are all a pipe-dream.

It is often asserted that a university is rated by its standing in athletics. Purdue still holds her reputation with the college paper coming out daily with the question on the front page: "What is the trouble with athletics at Purdue?" Columbia seems to run right along without football. There are a few other things that decide the rank of a school or else Nebraska will have to be classed below St. Louis; and that would be a joke.

Don't forget the Y. M. C. A. supper Friday night. It is an opportunity to mix with men in the University. Turn out and see how many fine fellows there are in school who are glad to know you—men that you may never meet otherwise. There are other ways of getting acquainted besides being a politician and here is one of them.

If every college and university in the country should hold annual exercises as interesting and well attended as those of last Tuesday how long would lice forestry are even now on the wood-importing list, the need of forestry in the wood-exporting countries is doubly enforced.

Russia, Sweden, Austria-Hungary and Canada, for instance are making good the wood deficit of a large part of the world. Sweden cuts much more wood (106,000,000 cubic feet) than she produces; Russia, in spite of her enormous forest resources, has probably entered the same road; and England, the leading-importer of wood, must count more and more on Canada. But the United States consumes every year from three to four times the wood which its forests produce, and in due time will doubtless take all the wood that Canada can spare. In other words, unless the countries of the western hemisphere apply forestry promptly and thoroughly, they will one day assuredly be held responsible for a world-wide timber famine.

Jess Caley went to Ames, Iowa, last week to assist in the installation of a chapter of Alpha Tau Omega. He gave a toast at the banquet on "College Life."
