Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second-class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

They say that Esperanto's rules have absolutely no exceptions.

The Reinsch Lectures today and tomorrow are recommended to the students as one of the best opportunities of the year to hear a man who stands near the head of the list on questions of political science.

Politics are extremely unsettled and particularly in the United States. There is scarcely any question on which political parties have taken a definite stand. University age is the time to form some definite opinions on political questions, the time when ed-year will count for little as far as work is concerned and a good deal in the pleasure of the spring season. The home stretch is the place to do your sprinting. There are a good many things left to take your time and effort besides idly wandering about the campus. Track athletics are scarcely begun; baseball is only well underway and numberless college functions of one sort and another call for the help of the students. Have you arranged your time so as to get the most good out of it both for yourself and for the University?

Amherst, William, Wesleyan and Dartmouth have all taken a vote as to students playing summer baseball. The opinion seems to be decidedly in favor of permitting such men to play, provided they conform to the standards of eligibility as to scholarship. Brown has had such a ruling for some time and it has proved successful in that the standards of the teams have not been lowered.

The disappearance of the junior poster from the bulletin case in the Main building is just another case of buncombe. There is no great crime in the taking, but the inconvenience to the committee is considerable. The one who has the poster ought to think the matter over and return it. If he does that he will deserve a good word, but if he fails to return the property, he deserves a bad name, and people who deserve that always get it.

Harper's Weekly has the following editorial: "On March 19th Professor Munsterburg of Harvard in talking about the dangerous illusions of so-called 'common sense' and the help that experiments in mental science may be to the solution of cases that

ONLY THE BEST TAILORS

Are employed making our Kensington Clothes. That's the secret of their reputation for style and fit not found in other makes. No matter what make of clothes you've been wearing, if you haven't worn a Kensington you haven't had the best. The cost is only a trifle more than others, but they wear twice as long. Just try one this spring.

ucational influences and openness to conviction should make the formation of such opinions most reliable. Every thing good which the student can hear on world questions should therefore not only be taken in but digested and formed into his own ideas of true citizenship.

The Columbia papers contain the story of a man who has been in attendance at that University for twenty-seven years. Mr. W. C. B. Kemp when a sophomore was bequeathed an annuity of $2,500, annually so long as he remained in college. His story reminds one of some of the less extreme examples of stick-to-itiveness in our midst. Mr. Kemp, however, has succeeded in taking four degrees and is ambitious to secure the rest of those listed in the catalogue. In this respect the parallel is faulty. It is hard to understand why it takes some people six and seven years to do what some are able to accomplish in half the time.

We are now on the home stretch. The tendency is always to neglect work, thinking that the few weeks left in the come before courts of social questions, said he found the case of alcohol in point. A psychologist would be able to show, he said, how far alcohol was a factor in crime, and then he dared to say, 'Life without stimulants leads to a certain mental monotony which from another point of view is exceedingly dangerous. The only solution of this problem would be in strong education for temperance, but not absolute temperance.'

"If college professors continue to make statements that qualify their position on this and similar questions, how can we expect the students to be total abstainers. Of course Munsterburg is German."

Mrs. Alma James, wife of W. G. James, a student at the University, died Saturday, March 28, at their home on Thirteenth and R streets. The body was taken to Dawson, Neb., the old home of the deceased, for burial. Besides the husband she leaves an infant daughter.
