DIFFERENT VIEW

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN IDEAS NOT THE SAME.

Americans Consider Morals, Englishmen the Property Rights Involved, Says Prof. Guernsey Jones.

That temperance agitation in England will increase, with a growing chance of final success, is the expectation of Professor Guernsey Jones, who spoke at Convocation yesterday on "English Temperance Legislation." Professor Jones emphasized the different ways in which Americans and Englishmen approach the question. Here it is a question of morality; there the primary consideration is property.

"The temperance movement which is sweeping over this country has its components in European countries," said Professor Jones. "The movement there seems mild compared with ours, England being the most progressive.

"The timidity with which the English have approached the temperance question has not been due to better conditions there than elsewhere. In fact, the English saloons are quite as objectionable as our own and their numbers are proportionately greater. In all England the proportion of saloons to population is one to three hundred. Here in Lincoln we have one saloon for every thousand or twelve hundred inhabitants. In Oxford and Cambridge, two great English university towns, the number of persons to each saloon are one hundred and eighty-four and one hundred and forty-five, respectively. The English saloon interests wield a tremendous political influence. Thus we see that the problem is even more pressing there than in this country.

"The reasons for the timidity in approaching the matter are several. Tradition in England is opposed to legislation which restricts individual liberty. Gladstone in the early nineties condemned the refusal of licenses on the ground that such action would harm free trade. We must consider also that in England, the brewing business is eminently respectable. Lords are among the leaders of the liquor interests. The business is a recognized avenue of political preferment.

"The English persist in looking upon the question from the standpoint of the property involved. They believe that the liquor dealer must be compensated for his loss of income. The first temperance measure became a law in 1904. It provided that every holder of a license must contribute about $50 to a compensation fund, this money to be used in compensating dealers whose licenses were retired. The English license is peculiar in that, although it is subject to renewal annually, it has come to be regarded as a permanent asset of the holder. Licenses are valued as high as $50,000, their value of course being entirely speculative. About ten years ago the brewers bought up a

CHINA MISSIONS.

Talk by Returned Missionary in Y. W. Rooms Yesterday.

Miss Patterson, a returned missionary from China and now acting as traveling secretary for the American Board, gave a most interesting talk in the Y. W. rooms Tuesday noon. Miss Patterson is a very charming speaker and her account of Chinese life and customs was made particularly interesting because of her own interesting personality. She had much to tell of our foreign neighbors, especially of their manner of living, their strange moral standards in many instances, and their present needs. All the students of the University will be enabled to hear Miss Patterson for she speaks in convocation Thursday morning upon the work now being carried on in China, particularly by graduates of Nebraska University.

GEOLOGY TRIP.

Dr. Condra's Class Does Some Field Work.

Dr. Condra's class in agricultural and field geology took a trip to Pleasant Dale and Milford last Saturday. They left at 6 a. m. via the Burlington, returning late in the evening. Special study of the different formations in that vicinity was made. At the invitation of Adjutant General Culver the class visited the Shogo Lithia bottling works, where they saw in process of packing a shipment for Panama. On the return trip the class walked to Emerald, studying the glacial deposits prominent in the railway cuts. There were seventeen people in the party, which was conducted by Dr. Condra, Messrs. Keyser, Chase, and Perron. Dr. Condra expects to take another party to the Platte during vacation.

"CASCADE CONFERENCE."

Former Visitors Will Talk on Summer Meeting Tonight.

Tonight a good rousing meeting will be held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms concerning the summer conference to be held at Cascade this summer from June 12 to 22, inclusive. Men who have attended the conferences heretofore held at Lake Geneva will talk and arouse interest among the fellows. It is hoped that a large crowd will attend Cascade from here at the coming summer conference.

For a number of years the summer conference has been held at Lake Geneva, but the attendance has been so large, especially from these mid-west states, that in order to improve the work hereafter the conference for this section will be held at Cascade.

If you are interested, come out and hear the kind of work that is done there.

Begins promptly at 6:50 and closes promptly at 7:30.

Special Meeting of Medical Society.

A special meeting of the Medical Society of the University Medical Department was called at 12 o'clock Monday, baseball matters being the most important business. Mr. C. F. Charlton is manager and Mr. Hickman captain. A committee of three was appointed to see members of the faculty and ask for their staunch support.

The New Mexico Agricultural College recently suffered a $2,000 loss by the burning of the mess hall, Klondike by name. The fire was discovered before it had gained much headway, but since the only method of fighting was by a bucket brigade and the building a frame structure, it was soon a mass of flames. One of the students had a narrow escape from death while a number were unable to save any of their belongings.

FRESHMAN RULE

LINE-UP OF CORNHUSKERS IS MATERIALLY CHANGED.

Harris, Sturtzenegger and Greenlit Benched—Some New Equipment Purchased for the Trip.

The adoption of the Freshman rule by the Athletic Board has made quite a change in the line-up of the Cornhuskers. Shortstop Harris and Catchers Sturtzenegger and Greenlit were put on the bench. This has forced the change of Klein to first base and Denslow to backstop, while shortstop is again wide open. Dudgeon will probably cover second since the change of Klein, and Beltzer will hold down the third sack.

The advent of Sleuter has put new hope into the hearts of the fans, as the left garden is now sure to be well cared for.

The pitching staff is causing some worry on account of the wildness of most all of the boys, but it is still early in the year and by the time the trip is well started the boys will be playing a number one baseball.

When the Cornhusker baseball team leaves on the Eastern trip they will not need to be ashamed of the equipment that has been furnished for their use in the games.

In addition to the new suits purchased last year, Manager Eager has received a full equipment of baseball coats that will be served out to the men who make the team.

These coats are double-breasted affairs, box cut, and have double rows of pearl buttons as large as dollars down the front. Upon the arms are diamonds in scarlet, blazoned with a cream N, and the three large pockets are each decorated with the initial.

Besides the suits and coats, two sets of caps will be given out. The one gray to match the uniforms and to be worn in games, the other a red skull cap bearing a white initial, to be worn with citizens clothes while on the road.

The team will put up a splendid appearance, and it is hoped that in spite of the passing of the freshman rule, which has been extremely costly to Nebraska's hopes, they will be able to put up a class of ball that will not belie the classy uniforms.

The Department of Electrical Engineering at the University of Illinois, recently gave a public exhibition of electrical apparatus. A miniature power plant, running a K. W. generator, a wireless telegraph system, a small electric railway, manual, and automatic telephone systems, and many other similar appliances, were demonstrated. The show was a success and will be attempted again next year.

Two upper classmen at Minnesota, over-anxious lest they be slammed in the annual's joke section, looted the "Gopher" archives the other night, destroying much "dope" and several photographs.
