The University has instituted what is called a college hour, which is a time set apart each month for the faculty and student body to meet and get together on questions of University interest. This isn't often enough unless you look at the matter from the point of view of the faculty member who receives advice regularly from his students as to the ability of other members of the teaching force.

Next Friday occurs another series of lectures along lines of world politics by a man of international reputation. It is not talk to say that no student ought to miss these opporshoes of just this style the expense may seem unnecessary. It has been the custom for years that students should buy second-hand military suits at a low price, thus reducing the expense of drill. This had continued until the appearance of the Battalion was so poor owing to the old style and worn-out clothes that it was considered advisable to adopt a more up-to-date uniform. And in order to make the change as cheap as possible, men who already owned suits were not forced to make the change. Tan shoes are, however, absolutely necessary to match the new uniform and so they are being provided at the lowest possible figure. When you stop to consider that the new uniform requires none of the extras necessary for the old blues, such as white gloves, blue flannel shirt, white trousers and campaign hat, the total cost of the new outfit is even less than the old style and the cadets will be even more apt to get a good price if they desire to sell out at the end of the year.

In addition to the need of having a decent looking battalion and the comparative expense of the two uniforms, the new suit is more sensible. It wears better, can be cleaned with ordinary care and is much more comfortable. The battalion is now in shape to represent the University with some degree of respectability. What is the slight inconvenience of being required to buy a uniform style of shoe which you can get wear out of any time as compared with the comfort and appearance of the whole battalion?

Special lectures by Professor Clements at the University of Minnesota are proving popular among students there. The series covers the field of evolution, and the professor deals ex-

The Harvard Medical School

With the completion of the new buildings, which were dedicated September 25th, 1906, this school now has facilities and equipment for teaching and research in the various branches of medicine probably unequalled in this country. Of the five buildings, four are devoted entirely to laboratory teaching and research. Numerous hospitals afford abundant opportunities for clinical instruction in medicine and surgery.

COURSE FOR THE DEGREE OF M. D.

tunities. The lectures last week were attended by a large number of the faculty and a good many of the distinguished people of the city, but the students were a minus quantity. Almost every one who went at five o'clock returned in the evening and were given a treat that is not soon to be forgotten. Don't miss these things.

The conclusion of the girls' basketball season was more bright than that of the boys this year. They returned with a victory and a pleasant visit as their assets, neither of which befell the boys. This one game in which women have an opportunity to compete intercollegiate ought to be arranged, as it seems to have been this year, so that no objection from any point of view can be made to it. Much credit is due the departments of these two schools in pulling off two such contests as we had this year.

Michigan's faculty has made a new ruling which forbids all special students from participating in college activities. The ruling is intended to effect those who come to the university, not for work, but merely to take part in athletics or other activities.

Michigan students who are under arrest for participation in the recent riot, received $92.50 from the recent benefit performance at the Majestic vaudeville theater. The University Glee and Mandolin Clubs took part in the program.

Spring football practice began at Yale yesterday and the candidates worked under the direction of L. H. Biglow, captain of the eleven last fall. It will last until the Easter vacation. The annual punting contest will be held late in April.
