STRONG ADDRESS

CHANCELLOR OF KANSAS UNIVERSITY AT CONVOCATION.

Present Age Great, But Faulty In Some Respects—Comparisons With Former Ages.

"The Present Age and Some Things Which Are Not Done" Was the subject of a most admirable address at Convocation yesterday by Chancellor Strong of Kansas University. Chancellor Strong is a deep thinker and presents the results of his thought in clear and forceful English. The Chancellor said:

"The present age is an age of realities. We of this age constantly seek bigness, efficiency, and power. For this reason this is a mechanical age. I believe that one of the greatest developments of the time is the work of the scientists—the discoveries in bacteriology and other branches.

"This age is also great in the law. Yet it does not equal the greatness of the age of Henry II. We are proud of our schools of agriculture and engineering. Yet the means by which the ancients made a territory far less productive than are Nebraska and surrounding states, support the population of the times is a thing to wonder at. Then, too, the engineering works of Egypt, the East and the Roman Empire are well worth study by modern students.

"In studying history we must come to the conclusion that had Rome made use of the great unifying principles of Christianity the empire might still endure. The greatest tie binding people together is the religious tie. Historic Christianity is everywhere the underlying principle.

"This age has not learned law and order yet. This is due partly to the repulsion of the old ideas of religious authority. It is further due to the great wave of criticism, destructive as well as constructive. And there is still another reason. Who is it that has authority over the children. There is only one place where authority is enforced over the child. That is in the public school system. The training of the child in the public school is the only remaining agent for law and order, and this alone prevents anarchy.

"I wish to say a word regarding a recent statement that the universities are failures as moral leaders because of the university men and women regarding themselves as privileged characters. This fault lies in us—in you and I. If law and order are not practiced in the university, then they will not be practiced by the graduate after he leaves the university. We are not privileged in that sense. We are privileged in responsibilities.

"Into the University of Nebraska the people of the state—your fathers and your mothers—have cast of their toil and sacrifice. The man who uses the products of their toil to the detriment of the state is a traitor. I sincerely hope that Nebraska will have no such traitors."

appearance Charter Day," "Glee Club Disturbs Law Students by Loud Singing," and similar scare heads.

Yet in all cases the ability of the club forced acknowledgement, no matter what its financial condition or attitude in other matters might be. The club was unquestionably an entertainer of the first order. In the Home Concert last year numerous novelties were introduced, making the event one of exceptional excellence.

This year the club met with no difficulty after it was once started. For some time last fall it seemed probable that the time-honored institution would not resume its activities. But the enthusiasm of the members of last year's club would not be downed. A new organization was formed and vigorous practice was started. Concerts have been given at several points in the state and there are other dates yet to be filled. Lacking the objectionable sensational features, this year's club is likely to go on record as one of the most successful which the University has had.
