Seven years ago there were 1,400 men employed, the property value was $2,500,000, and there was only about twenty-four vacancies. Today 2,400 men are employed, there are something like 340 vacancies; property value is fifty-four millions, and the budget is $5,000,000. A remarkable increase.

The necessary money to continue the work can be procured, but the men to fill the positions are the chief hindrance to the work.
