HOW TO DETECT THEM.

Many people do not know what the T. N. E.'s are and still more do not know who they are. The question was heard so many times on the compus yesterday that it appears some convenient and simple formula for detecting a T. N. E. would be useful.

In the first place, you must have a suspicion that a certain man is a T. N. E. Then approach him casually and walk at least half a block with him before broatching the subject. After he has commented on the weather, you might suggest in an indifferent manner that yesterday's issue of the "Nebraskan" was quite interesting. If he tries to appear unconcerned, laughs in a little half-hearted way, possibly blushes a little (though as a rule they are not the blushing kind) and says, "Darned if not,"—then he is a T. N. E.

mortal lines:

Of Cerberus and blackest Midnight

In Stygian cave forlorn

'Mongst horrid shapes, and shricks, and sights unholy!

Find out some uncouth cell, where brooding darkness spreads his jealous wings.

And the night raven sings;

There, under ebon shades and lowbrowed rocks,

As ragged as thy locks,

In dark Cimmerian desert ever dwell.

To see one of the blighting influences of T. N. E, we have but to notice the condition of that greatest of American games-baseball-in this University. For several years "Nebraska" has had a losing ball team. They have not only been beaten, but disgracefully beaten,-and deservedly so. And what is more, seventy-five per cent of the students don't care a rain-check whether they win or lose, and wouldn't go two blocks to see them play. Why is this? The answer is, T. N. E. Every year, regularly, good and deserving ball players are discarded in order that inferior ones who are "in" on the pull may have the places, and then with their votes help elect a "ring" captain for the next year's team. This year saw the annual farce repeated. The year began with seventy-five candidates and some excellent material out. Prospects for a winning team were excellent. But there could probably be assembled here at least two teams that could defeat the Varsity team now on its eastern trip. Some men whose places seemed assured were left out on the last day and known inferiors substituted. Is it any wonder that they have lost the first three games straight? Is it any wonder that no one seems to care?

The above remarks, however, will not apply to every member of the team, for several, (at least four), have worked hard and faithfully to make baseball and the "Nebraska" baseball appear on a moments thought. And far be it from us to say that these are the only three of the Ten Commandments which the T.N. E.'s habitually break.

A young man in the University has suggested that the "Nebraskan" provide a bureau of registration for the young ladies who are open to engagement for the Sophomore "hop." He says he has asked four and they are all taken, and thinks such a scheme would save some young man a good deal of trouble and the uninvited ladies much worry and a possible inability to attend. If there are any young ladies who take kindly to the plan it would be but the part of chivalry for the "Nebraskan" to do its share.

WHAT AILS THEM?

What is the matter with the T. N. E.s? Truly, "they have ears and hear not; they have eyes and see not," or they would realize that they are doomed. The day of gumshoe politics is past, in the college as well as outside. Public opinion is aroused and will no longer tolerate insidious methods of corrupt, machine politics whereby an unscrupulous few seek to control the interests of the many. A fraternity whose membership, meetings, and places of meeting are kept shrouded in mystery, whose doings will not bear the light of day and the investigation of honest men will be indeed accursed on earth and damned in the hereafter.

Milton might well have had T. N. E. in mind when he wrote those im-team a success. One man in particular, after making good in one position, after the team was reorganized did equally as well in another. These few, too, who would liked to have seen baseball on the square, were tempted to withdraw from the team, but knew that that would only have made matters worse.

It is entirely obvious that the malignant influence of T. N. E. is not limited to college politics, but is moral,—or rather immoral,—as well. The T. N. E.'s number among their members some of the most notorious "boozers" in school. Of course, on the face of the matter, they are hypocrites or they couldnt be T. N. E.'s, and, being as a rule champion "sluffers," they are soon driven to cheating to get through school. Here are drinking lying, and stealing which
