Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second-class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Yesterday morning's musical program in chapel was one of the most enjoyable of the year. The work of our chorus is commendable. It is especially commendable because it is so truly representative of the school.

Competitive drill occurs today at the farm and a large crowd is expected as usual. Regardless of weather the students always turn out to witness this annual event. From the underclass man's point of view this is what makes his year's work in the military department worth while. In going through a contest of this kind with forty other men makes him a friend and comrade of every other man in his company. After weeks of hard practice, every bit of which does him good, the private, the corporal and the sergeant get out for team work that dents usually desire to talk over their plans with parents this will give them something definite to propose for the next year's work.

It is the usual thing, however, to find students thinking after a year's residence at the University that they know exactly what is best for them. It was in answer to this mistaken notion that the system held sway so long, under which "elective aptitudes" of the student decided his course or freedom from anything like a course. It is pretty well agreed nowadays that the student needs advice. The faculty of the University is unable to give each student the attention that he ought to have. Parents and friends, then, ought to be consulted. Under the new system the student begins to think about his course early. Let him not forget that although father and mother may not have attended college, their advice is good, nevertheless. And the alumni of the institution are so numerous as to make it possible to get help somewhere before returning in the fall. The new plan ought, therefore, help decrease the number of complaints from graduates that they were permitted to register for anything and everything their notions pointed toward.

Four Years Ago.

The captains of the different companies were given swords.

The Freshmen class ventured forth with caps. Trouble is anticipated.

Hon. W. J. Bryan addressed the students on "Principles in Politics."

Company A won the annual competitive drill. Company Q celebrated the event in the evening.

Nebraska won in the Minnesota-Nebraska track meet by a score of 62 to 55.

The battalion was pleasantly welcomed in York by a heavy and exhilarating rain.

is to bring honor to the colors of the company. Only one company can win but all can put up a good drill.

The old habit of painting the town red after the drill, has almost disappeared in the last few years and it is hoped, for the good of the winners and the reputation of the school that it will be completely done away with this year. There can be but little objection to the usual demonstrations with the exception of the injury to property and the daubing up of things about the town. Don't think that such things are an indication of company spirit or college spirit. They simply indicate "BUNCOMBE."

The new method of registration should receive the careful attention of all. By this means the overcrowding that usually attends registration will be greatly lessened. Where stu-

It's Remarkable

How clothes can be made to fit so perfectly, said a wearer of one of our Kensington Suits. This is a sample of the good things we hear every day for them. If they weren't good, extra good, so many men capable of judging wouldn't be wearing them. Make in models to fit men of every proportion, and wonderfully designed and tailored. There's a tremendous amount of hand work put into them, too. Settle the Suit Question today--look the Kensingtons over.
