 The first issue of the Purdue Agriculturist, Vol. 3, has made its appearance and speaks well for another successful year. The magazine is some forty pages in thickness and contains much valuable reading matter and many articles of interest.
 Seventy-five students are now registered in the college of pharmacy of the University of Minnesota while the department has accommodations for only thirty-five. The situation is so bad that most of the students have to take their work in the medical chemistry laboratory. Dean Wulling estimates that one hundred thousand dollars would be necessary to build and equip a suitable building.
 President Murlin, of Baker, has announced the raising of $37,589 for endowments during the summer months. This more than covers the amount necessary to secure the additional gift of $12,000 from Andrew Carnegie for the library building, to which he has already given $25,000, and to which Judge Case has given $15,000, making a total of $52,000 for the building.
 Yale lost money on her baseball team last season. Taking all the branches of athletics into consideration, the season was a failure financially. It is not the size of the school that counts, it's the kind of support they give and get.
 During the summer about seventy-five alumni of Greek letter societies in Kansas City, formed a Pan-Hellenic club. Thirteen college secret fraternities were represented at the meeting which resulted in the organization of a permanent social club. The new organization is to be run much on the order of the University club.
 Students of the University of Southern California are planning to provide a perpetual trophy to be given in memory of Charles Richardson, a U. S. C. athlete, who was drowned last spring. The trophy will be awarded to the athlete making the highest number of points in the regular field and track schedule.
