He showed by a study of coal supply and consumption and present day conditions, the problem confronting the engineer of the future, to find a less wasteful method of power production. He brought out the fact that electrical transmission is a step in the right direction. Following this there was a general discussion of both papers: The next meeting will be held at 7:30 p. m., December 1, in M 210. At this time a number of men will give their ex-

STATE FARM Y. M. C. A. BUSY

Agricultural Branch at Work Welcoming Students.

The state farm branch of the university Y. M. C. A. has been exceedingly busy this week welcoming new students from over the state and aiding them in getting settled. The first term of the agricultural school opened Monday, and since that time the students have been pouring in on every train.

The Y. M. C. A. had representatives at the stations who met the new students as they came in and aided them in transferring their baggage and in transporting it and themselves to their rooming houses. This was done in pursuance of a plan whereby each new student had been asked some time ago to send in his time of arrival to the association. All students who had done this were taken care of by the association and the efforts of its workers were much appreciated.

Next Friday evening the farm organization will give an opening stag social which will mark the beginning of its series of the social events. The leaders in the work expect a membership of about 150 farm students and will start next week in guest of Bible study enrollments.
