

NEBRASKA WINS FROM AMES.

For Ames there were four men who stood out as stars. They were E. Lambert, G. Lambert, Hubbard and Captain Law. The first three made up the backfield, and Law played at left tackle.

"SI" Lambert at fullback was by far the best backfield man in the game. His work on the runs around the ends was sensational. He made good gains nearly every time he carried the ball. He was so fleet that the Nebraska players experienced much trouble in tackling him. His speed and dodging ability enabled him to make a touchdown from a punt to the forty-yard line by Nebraska.

Hubbard, with "SI" Lambert, formed a wonderful pair. Hubbard showed up to greatest advantage in running back punts. He also made several good gains on end runs. G. Lambert did his best work on the defense and helped stop several Nebraska players on runs.

Captain Law Plays Hard.

Captain Law of the Aggies worked like a tiger and on the defense was the best star on his team. He showed up especially well in the second half, tearing after the Nebraska players and tackling with a sureness that prevented many gains by the Cornhuskers.

The Ames line was noticeably weaker than the Cornhuskers' and frequently gave way to attacks. Right guard and right tackle were not as strong as the men on the other side of the line.

Ames excelled in the certainty of its tackling. Instead of tackling high as the Nebraska players the Aggies hit low and brought down the Nebraska runners with a sureness that stopped all further advance. Nebraska's tackling was so high that sometimes struggling Aggie players were able to slip away and gain a few feet or yards before being securely fastened to the ground.

Otto Kotouc, '08, was pleasantly surprised at his home at Humbolt, Neb., last Thursday night by a number of his university friends and members of the "Komensky" club, who came down from Lincoln to help him celebrate his election to the state legislature. This was Mr. Katouc's first venture in politics. He will undoubtedly be the youngest member of the legislature, the "Boy Representative" from Richardson county.
