

All-Missouri Valley Football Elevens

In selecting an all-Missouri valley football eleven the Daily Nebraskan has endeavored to pick from among the players of the seven conference schools eleven men who if they were placed together on one team would play the best game of any college team that could be produced in this section of the country. This eleven would be able to play with such a degree of variety on both the offense and defense as would be essential to victory under the new rules.

Ewing, Nebraska Guard

Every point of the modern game has been taken under consideration and men have been chosen who would work best with the forward pass, the on-side kick and other open plays on the offense and against a heavy line on the defense.

Fast, heavy players are necessary to a winning team under the new rules and the men picked for the all-Missouri eleven are given places with this fact at hand.

The ends and backfield have to be given as much consideration, and even more, than the line since the reform wave swept over the country. Men skilled in handling the forward pass, in punting, and in drop kicking are important factors in giving a team its standing now. All these points have been brought together in the selection of the Daily Nebraskan's eleven.

Reppert at End.

Reppert of Ames is selected for left end because of his speed and aggressiveness. He fights against an opposing player with a fierceness that is wearing on a man. He is always in the game and even the fastest ends cannot get away from him. He is the hardest man to box there is in punting. In the Kansas game it was his work that prevented the Jayhawkers from scoring in the first half and that kept the score down to ten points in the second.

Hubbard at Halfback.

Hubbard is given the other half because of his fierce playing in all games. He runs back punts long distances; makes long end runs, and is an excellent dodger.

the Missouri valley. He does not become fatigued and no matter how hard the game is, he plays just as good ball at its close as he does at the beginning.

Captain Harvey of Nebraska is given the other wing position. He is the best end in the valley to work with the forward pass. He gets down under the ball well and with a fairly accurate pass can be relied upon to get the ball. With an accurate passer like Beltzer, of his own team, he is a most dangerous man for any team to guard on the forward pass. On the defense he plays a brilliant game, being a hard fighter. He plays end so well that he is not easily circled for gains. His exhibition in the Kansas-Nebraska game proved his worth. He is made captain because of his good judgment in the use of plays.

Driver, of Missouri, and Hyland, of Iowa, are put at ends on the second eleven. Both have played consistent ball all season. Driver has done and especially the Nebraska contest. His strong point is in getting through the line and breaking up plays. He is a tireless worker, and gets into every play and frequently stops dangerous advances.

Frum of Nebraska and Caldwell of Law, Ames Tackle

Kansas both have shown strength and steadiness. They can stand a great deal of hammering. Frum is a good man to open holes for a player who is carrying the ball. He shows up well when Chaloupka is called upon to carry the ball through his side of the line.

To Collins of Nebraska falls the center position. His power, accurate passing and aggressive play entitle him to the leading honors at the pivotal position. Carlson of Kansas is also a great aggressive player at center and he showed up well in both the Iowa and Nebraska games. He is placed on the second eleven.

Ewing Strong Guard.

To flank Collins Ewing of Nebraska and Reed of Kansas are selected as more toward making Missouri a factor in the Missouri valley than any other player on that team. He is speedy and steady. Hyland deserves great credit for his showing in the Iowa-Kansas and Nebraska-Iowa games. In both of these contests he played brilliant ball. He works well with the forward pass and is a stubborn man to box.

Johnson of Nebraska and Hennessey of Kansas play brilliant ball at times and give promise of becoming steady players.

Chaloupka Great Tackle.

To Chaloupka of Nebraska is given the greatest honors as a tackle and he is undoubtedly the unanimous choice of all the critics for one of the positions. His play from the opening of the season has been strong. He is such a worker that he shares the task of the ends. He gets down the field on punts and during the season has been a great aid to his captain in working off plays on the offense. On the defense he has the weight that makes an aggressive player and the force to make a good ground gainer. He hits the opposing line with powerful plunges and is an excellent man to call out of the line to carry the ball.

Captain Law, of Ames, is picked for the other tackle position on account of his splendid play in all the games, guards. These three men make an ideal center trio and would probably be by far the strongest that could be brought together in the Missouri valley. Ewing's strength and steadiness make him a most valuable man. He plays the same kind of ball every game and has kept his position impregnable to attacks in all excepting the Kansas game. He is a tireless worker.

E. Lambert, Ames Fullback

Reed is a great player in making interference for a backfield man. He is so bulky that it is hard for any team to gain through his position. He has considerable speed for a man of his size and has adapted himself to the new game. He is a great defensive player.

Seidel of Iowa and Miller of Iowa are given places on the second eleven. They play an aggressive game and hold up well on the defense.

Harte of Nebraska deserves special mention. He is a gritty player and fights hard. He would make a great offensive player at fullback.

Cooke of Nebraska is placed at quarter. This is his third year with the Cornhuskers, and he has become a competent field general. He is speedy, and is extremely valuable to a team because of his ability to make long runs. This he has shown great improvement in his work. He dodges better than before and has quit his fatal running back when carrying the ball.

Deatherage on Second Team.

Deatherage of Missouri is given the quarterback position on the second team. He is a master of the open game and is very tricky. Johnson of Kansas has at times shown speed and headwork which in another year ought to make him a great quarter.

Without doubt "Si" Lambert of Ames is the unanimous choice for fullback. He has speed combined with great headwork that makes him a power in the backfield. His speed enables him to circle ends and plow through the line. His handling of the forward pass is a strong point for him.

Kirk of Iowa and Hubbard of Ames are hard line hitters and have shown brilliancy that is worthy of note. Kirk gains well when carrying the ball and is placed on the second eleven.

Kirk of Iowa and Hubbard of Ames are chosen as the backfields. Kirk is selected for his drop kicking and

Harvey, Nebraska End

Beltzer of Nebraska and Bond of Kansas are made half backs of the second team. Beltzer's punting and excellent work in throwing the ball on the forward pass entitle him to recognition. He is the best man in the valley in passing the ball forward, and if he had developed in drop kicking he would be the unanimous choice for a position on the first eleven.

Bond of Kansas is placed on the second team because of his charging and speed. He can carry the ball long distances and often.

Birkner of Nebraska plays a steady game and in another year should be a wonder. Temple of Nebraska is another player who deserves mention. He can play at either halfback or fullback. He is a powerful player on the defense and in another year will develop greatly.

Oregon agricultural college has introduced a new department this year, that of public speaking, which will be a compulsory prerequisite to a degree in all courses.
