Miss Sarah Hrbek, of the Bohemian department, left last night for Wilber to give a lecture under the direction of the "Komensky" club of that city. Tonight she lectures at Crete before a similar organization.

The Lindell cafe is making an innovation in their Sunday evening suppers in the way of a special menu prepared by one of Chicago's famous chefs. Music is furnished by a four-piece orchestra. The management is catering especially to university students.

The senior play tryouts will be held in U. 106 February 8, from 7 to 10 p. m. A book of the play is to be found at the reserve desks in the library, from which to copy the parts. Full particulars are enclosed in the manuscript. All seniors are urged to try out.

Professor Shinek of the Iowa state university is giving a number of lectures in the state and will stop in Lincoln for a few hours January 17. While here he will be the guest of the "Komensky" club. The professor is a favorite with the students and since the organization of the club here has paid it annual visits.

Professor Caldwell, following out the example set by the heads of several other departments in the university, has handed in a few corrections of Dean Davis' tables on the American history department as published in the report to the Chancellor. Professor Caldwell's figures and those in the Dean's report are as follows:

WHAT GRADUATES DO.
Electrical Engineering in the Case School of Applied Science.
Average of Twenty-five Men.
 The department has for the past two years graduated an average of twenty-five men, which is about double the output of preceding years. The present graduating class will be in excess of thirty.
 A very high percentage of those graduating from the department is to be found in the profession; less than 2 per cent going into other lines of work.
 Notwithstanding the slump in Westinghouse, which temporarily threw a number of the electrical engineering graduates out of employment last year, all are at present provided with desirable employment in electrical lines. In fact recent inquiries for our graduates, six men being desired by one concern alone, to become under-study salesmen, have met with the inability of the department to name candidates by virtue of the fact that no one appears to be unemployed.

 If it is true, as I have attempted to make clear, that the proposed junior society has no purpose, and is unnecessary, then it goes without saying that it is impracticable.
 But suppose it has a purpose, and is necessary. It will still be impracticable, for the right kind of men will not be elected to it to make it practicable. I say this, because in many instances strong men do not develop till well into their junior year, while the would-be-politician and the grafter are in evidence from the very first. Men chosen for the Innocents are elected by students who are just about to bid farewell to their Alma Mater. It would be vastly different in the case of a junior society, in which the men chosen would still be in their sophomore year (think of picking strong men from a sophomore class) and the choosers would be men likely to have interests of school dimmed by over-shadowing interests of class and self. As the men are, so would be the organization.
 I do not wish to appear to be offering this in the spirit of "knocking," but it seems that a little thought will

THE PROPOSED SOCIETY.
 Lincoln, Jan. 14.—Editor of Daily Nebraska: I notice in the columns of your paper that a movement is on foot to establish a society in the junior class to correspond with the Innocents. It seems to me that an attempt to inaugurate such an organization is absurd, unnecessary and impracticable.
 It is absurd, because the movement as inaugurated by President Byerts, has no purpose. The society, as suggested by him, was to be "similar to the Innocents." Similar in what way?

The Innocents were organized for the purpose of promoting university activities. Does the proposed junior society intend to take away from the Innocents, in any measure, the duties attributed to that society by precedent of years? I hope not.
 Perhaps the junior society is proposed merely as an assistant, as it were, to the Innocents? It will be noted that one of the purposes of the Innocents is the organization of university activities. One society as an executive head to carry out such activities is enough. "Too many cooks spoil the broth." The instant a secondary society persists in forcing its services on the student body, perfect organization ceases.
 Surely it is not the purpose of any over-zealous junior to interfere with the excellent organization of the Innocents have had established for so many years?
 Having no purpose, there can be no need of such a junior society. But suppose there were a purpose, there still would be no need. The senior society so far has demonstrated that it is efficiently able to promote, organize and control such school affairs as lie within the province of such an organization. The Innocents do not represent any class, they represent the whole school. Such could never be said of a junior society from the very nature of the fact that they are show that I am correct in my fears that such a proposed junior society would be purposeless, would be a hindrance rather than a help, and cannot accomplish any definite end.
