Nearly 150 attended the reception given Tuesday evening by the Nebraska art association in honor of the Nebraska legislators who are now in session in the city. Of the 150, nearly half of that number were members of the legislature. Governor and Mrs. A. C. Shallenberger, Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Bryan, Mrs. Paul Holm, and Mrs. Grove Barber were in the receiving line. A mandolin orchestra furnished the music for the occasion.

The tickets for the sophomore informal, which will be given at Fraternity hall on Friday, January 29, are now on sale at $1.00 a piece and may be obtained from any of the members of the committee. The committee expect to duplicate the success of the sophomore hop which was held at the Lincoln annex two weeks ago, and they are exerting every effort to make the informal an enjoyable function. The committee is as follows: K. P. Frederick, Alden Bumstead, Lafayette Blanchard and Lynn Loyd.

Three hundred and sixty thousand dollars is the sum which the board of regents recommended be appropriated by the state legislature for the erection of new buildings, improvements and equipment at a meeting on Tuesday. This is $10,000 more than was asked for in the annual report to the governor, the extra ten thousand representing the cost of erecting a new stock barn at the state farm. The board also recommended that the Carnegie proposition to pension members of the faculty also be accepted.

1,100 TICKETS ARE GIVEN OUT.

No Hour So Full That Students Cannot Be Accomodated.

Work in the registrar's office is now moving as smoothly as could be desired. Already about 1,100 tickets have been given out to students and the registrar declared that as yet no hour was so full that students could not be given attention. In this way it is now assured that there will be no necessity for a crowd at any time during next week.

The registrar wishes it understood that all students must be on hand at the beginning of the hour called for on their slips. If they are not on hand there is every possibility that they will not be ready when their number is called.

Ode to Freshman Botany.

The short ditty printed below was written by a freshman who has been struggling with Botany 1 this semester. He said he was provoked to hooke out this spasm by the changing of the time for the final examination in the first semester botany from next Tuesday, the date on the schedule, to Saturday of this week. The selection follows:
 (Tune: "The Wearing of the Green.")
 Just 'cause I'm from room 107
 They say that I'm a jay.
 My hair is full of chlorophyll,
 My mouth is full of hay.
 I live on plants and nitrogen
 That would surely kill a horse,
 And every time the reports come out
 I get an "F," of course.

I study every day until I "gas" I'm sick
 And for the nature of a plant I do not give a kick.
 One day its photosynthesis, the next its protoplasm,
 And by the time the week is up I nearly have a spasm.
 By WILLIE EVERYEFFORT.

DOES NOT LIKE USE OF SLANG.

Instructor Thinks Students Can Improve Language.

"Ain't it awful, Mabel? 'Can ye beat it?' 'Say, he ought to cheese it, for—'" but just at that moment the student's talk (for it was a student) was interrupted by an instructor who overheard the laconic utterances. This student's talk led the professor to give his opinion on the extensive use of slang by university students.

The professor's remarks were pointed. He dilated at some length on the subject of slang. He said the development of the propensity of students to talk in a slangy manner had gone on to so amazing an extent during the past five years that some university men now were not able to carry on a lengthy conversation without bringing into use several corrupted English words and phrases.

"Do you know," the Nebraska man warmed up, "that I have come into contact with certain students who, even in answering questions in class, are forced to resort to slang for words to express their meaning. Only a short time ago a student was explaining some occurrence in which two generals of ancient history were concerned. He came to a point in his account of the happenings where he wanted to say that one of the generals had gone to the assistance of his forces, who were fighting against those of the other officer's. Instead of saying that the general took charge of his army and waged the battle, the student hesitated a moment in his story and then spluttered out that the 'general butted in.' I felt like saying 'Can you beat that?'"

"The paucity of that student's line of good English expressions is no different from many others whom I hear talk frequently.

"We all use some slang, and I believe a certain amount of it is desirable. But when people come to the point where they cannot converse unless they must give out their thoughts in an over-abundance of corrupted English words, then I say there is time to taboo slang."
