Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second-class mail matter under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

FRIDAY, MARCH 19, 1909.

It is realized that the present Nebraska legislature was elected upon an economy platform and yet it will be hard to persuade Nebraska citizens that this included the economizing of the expenditures of Andrew Carnegie. Yet that is what the legislators seem bound to do.

Minnesota medical students recently suspended a human cadaver over the platform during chapel exercises. When the specimen was lowered into view, hanging suspended by a rope about its neck, several students fainted. Which prank causes one to wonder whether the medics were merely joking or simply endeavoring to introduce a new emblem representative of life at Minnesota. Undoubtedly some such design would be suitable for the Minnesota official seal.

By a recent publication of a bulletin of the national bureau of education Nebraska was ranked as maintaining a preparatory course in both academic work and agriculture. Other institutions such as Minnesota, Illinois and Wisconsin, were credited with being up to full university standard.

sheet was then much smaller and much less office room was needed than is now the case. At the present time with a staff of reporters the Nebraskan office is often crowded to such a point that it is impossible to do good work.

But this is not the most important side of the question. The manner in which the present offices are heated makes it impossible for one working in them to be comfortable. As the rooms are half below the ground the floor is below the top of the heating plant and thus it is necessary to have overhead radiators. The effect of this can only be appreciated by one who has worked in a room where the heat comes from above. The heating pipes in the Administration building are so arranged that it is impossible to turn off heat in any part of the building until the heat is turned off from the whole building. It is often necessary to have some heat for the offices on the north side of the building when any heat makes it too hot for work in the Nebraskan offices. In such a case as this the only thing that can be done is to open the windows, which is at best a very unsatisfactory method of ventilating.

The worst feature of the offices is encountered during registration week, when the large number of students on the floor above makes a constant sifting of dirt and dust from above, which covers everything and makes work impossible.

It would seem that it should be possible to find a room some place upon the campus where the uncomfortable features of the rooms in the basement of the Administration building would not be present. The Nebraskan is a university affair and deserves better treatment than it has received in this matter.

Since the publication, the Nebraska authorities have taken the matter up with the Washington men and the next bulletin will rank Nebraska where she belongs, as not maintaining a preparatory school. The Temple high school is an establishment for laboratory work on the part of university students. It is not a prep school, nor is the secondary school of agriculture in that class. Easterners are prone to think that western schools are not up to the standard in this as well as other ways, and it is gratifying to know that one such injustice has been righted.

ROOMS NOT SATISFACTORY.

The editorial rooms of the Daily Nebraskan are not adequate nor suitable for the work for which they were intended. Located in the basement of the Administration building, those who must work there are forced to work under the most disadvantageous circumstances. The inconvenience of the office has been felt all year but now that warm weather has come it is even more noticeable.

Of course the present offices are vastly superior to the offices that the Nebraskan used to have in University Hall. At that time the university publication was issued from the end of the hall on the second floor, but the which show the comparative growth of the libraries of different western universities. The figures do not by any means place Nebraska at the bottom of the list, but they do not show the rapid growth that should characterize a school of Nebraska's size.

Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota and Missouri all show a greater increase than Nebraska. The figures are as follows:

California	85,583
Michigan	77,560
Wisconsin	62,000
Illinois	58,686
Minnesota	50,000
Missouri	40,050
Ohio	38,359
Nebraska	25,445
Kansas	21,676
Indiana	21,000
Colorado	17,800
Iowa	10,000

NOTICE.

A meeting of the Swedish club will be held in U 7 today at 5 o'clock. The purpose of the club is strictly social and literary and to encourage enthusiastic loyalty in the university among Scandinavian students.
