FRIDAY, MARCH 26, 1909.

The State Farm has already adopted the plan of arranging its campus with an eye to the future. Even the trees which are to be planted there during the Arbor Day exercises each year will be planted with a definite system in view. It is not too late to commence something of this kind on the city campus.

The second of the student convocations was given at chapel yesterday morning and was noticeable for one thing—the faculty was entirely absent. There has been talk from time immemorial that the students do not properly attend chapel, but there is just as much excuse for the same statement about the faculty. It is especially unfortunate that the faculty should choose a day when chapel has been turned over to the students to be noticeable by their absence.

Anti-fraternity bills have been introduced into the legislatures of nearly every western state, and in every case where they have thus far come to a vote they have been defeated. An anti-fraternity bill is before the place to fill in the life of the university and a real work to do. It is the kind of an organization that does not require a great deal of work to keep alive, the kind of an organization that becomes a great honor because admission is gained not through any line of superficial activity but through work and efficiency.

The "N" at Nebraska does not rank where it should as one of the largest honors in school. This is due in part to causes which this new organization would correct. The mere fact that an active organization of "N" men was in existence would call attention to the meaning of the "N" and keep it before the mind of the underclassmen as an honor to be desired.

The practice of permitting others than those who earn the "N" to wear it on the campus has always had a large influence in this direction that could be corrected if taken in hand by such an organization. It is no more fitting or proper that one who has not done anything in athletics should wear the emblem won in that line than that a person should wear a hero medal which was won by another person.

There is no reason why an "N" has not the recognition that it should have, which can hardly be directly remedied by such an organization. "N's" are granted more liberally at the University of Nebraska than at the schools which have earned the greatest reputation in athletics. At Michigan it is very seldom that more than seven or eight "M's" are granted to the football team. This practice not only stimulates the keenest competition among the athletes but it makes the letter of the school so difficult to obtain that it is always held in the highest regard. It is to be hoped that if the proposed association of "N" men is formed it will take as one of its first actions, some method of starting a movement to reduce the number of "N's" that are given out each year.

Nebraska legislature, and those who are in touch with conditions at the University of Nebraska can only feel that conditions here are such that any different action in this state would be unjustifiable. Fraternities have their evils, just as all other things have, but any careful observer must admit that their advantages far surpass their disadvantages.

The Nebraska athletic management is still under the painful necessity of keeping its eye constantly open, in making up its football schedule, for games that will pay well. The people of Omaha have no college games played regularly in that city and so are ready to give the finest kind of patronage to any games that are played there. The announcement that the Thanksgiving game will be played in Omaha next year means that a tremendous crowd will see the game and that Nebraska's pocketbook will be well filled as a result. The fact that this game will not be played in Lincoln will work but little hardship upon the students, as most of them are out of town on Thanksgiving day.

"N" MEN'S ASSOCIATION.

The plan of forming an "N" men's association is an idea that has real merit. Such an organization has a real

of "N's" that are given out each year.

FACULTY MIXING AGAIN.

The Daily Cardinal of the University of Wisconsin recently gave space to an article on the relations between faculty and students in a large university that presents several new thoughts on an old subject. The article is as follows:

"When we attempt the great problem of bringing the instructor and student in closer touch with one another, we find the universal wish that such a thing might be done, but great scarceness of practical suggestions for methods necessary for its actual accomplishment. We ask first, where may the instructor meet the student? Class room meetings involve a didactic attitude on one side and an absorptive attitude on the other, which makes for general edification, but not for personal goodfellowship.

"Instead of expecting the professor to come all the way, why not interest ourselves in some of the affairs in which he is most interested? Our best faculty men are, more or less, wild-eyed in their enthusiasm for their subject, or one of its side lines. They are, correspondingly, open to conversation and appreciative of moderately intelligent interest on the part of students outside of class-room work.
