SATURDAY, APRIL 3, 1909.

The statement of Captain Workizer that there is no place suitable for a rifle range near Lincoln is merely another reason added to the list of reasons that have already been given why the cadet encampment should not be held in Lincoln. When all the reasons are gathered together they will make a pretty formidable list, and one that ought to make those in charge of the matter hesitate before attempting to put such a plan into execution.

BAD ADVERTISING.

The distribution of handbills at the different gates of the campus has come to be quite a popular way of advertising not only university events but bargains that are being offered by merchants of the city and all manners of things that are of no special interest to university students. That this is a very effective way of advertising must be admitted. The student is forced to take the proffered handbill and nine cases out of ten its contents are read. From the view point of the advertiser such a practice is ideal, but there is another side to the question.

being distributed at the gates. If a ruling should be made that no handbills should be distributed nearer than one block to the campus the whole problem would be solved. Very, very few would ever, under those conditions, get within the gates of the campus and the advertising possibilities of this method would still be not in the least injured. It would seem that the unbearable appearance of the campus when strewn with such handbills would be sufficient justification for the action here advocated.

COMES TO THE DEFENCE.

A good deal of material has recently found its way into the college press which tends to cast doubt on the value of inter-collegiate debating. The Daily Cardinal of the University of Wisconsin has felt called upon to combat this view, and argues the question as follows:

"The university professor who recently raised a protest from Missouri against college debating, voices a frame of mind which is becoming far too dominant in some university faculties. He accuses debating of giving the college man, 'who can have no convictions,' lawyer-like attitudes toward the truth.' And his argument stands or falls with the assumption that the college man is infantile in mind—that he is incapable of entertaining convictions and void of the power of action.

"This type of educator forgets, or does not know, the historic host of leaders and thinkers who have been scarcely older than average college men of today. It was in their university days that the Wesleys started Methodism; the German revolution of 1848 found its generation largely in the University of Munich. Alexander Hamilton, Pitt, Bonaparte, Emmett, Carnegie and Rockefeller were at-

CONCERT WAS WELL ATTENDED

Duet and Village Band Prove Especially Pleasing.

The university cadet band gave a concert at the University Temple last evening to a packed house. Even standing room was difficult to find. The band was under the direction of August Hagenow and gave a program which was good throughout. Several numbers which proved very popular with the audience were the cornet duet, "The Two Little Bullfinches," by Messrs. R. L. Harrison and A. E. Wood and "The Village Band."

The latter consisted of a series of old, familiar selections given as a burlesque of the "Village Band." The players were dressed in every variety of costume from that of a country pumpkin to all kinds of misfit uniforms which would have been a disgrace to any band and the playing consisted of such a series of discords, and stops on the part of the director as to make the pieces at times unintelligible.

The entire program, which was well appreciated, is here given: Overture—Le Macon.....Auber Dance of the Bayaderes, from the Opera, Feramors; Trot de Cavaliers.....Rubinstein Duo, for Cornets—The Two Little Bullfinches.....Kling Messrs. R. L. Harrison and A. E. Wood Parting, from Symphony, Leonore.....Raff Religious Meditation—The Last Hope.....Gottschalk Humoresque—The Village Band. Characteristic—

The bills that are distributed are seldom of such a nature that anyone would desire to keep them for more than a hasty glance. The result is that they are thrown away by nearly everyone not more than a hundred feet from where they have been received. After a thousand, more or less, of such handbills have been thrown loose upon the campus and the wind has done its part in distributing them the appearance of the campus can well be imagined.

The habit of throwing the bills upon the campus is universal. A few days ago a large number of advertisements were given out at the different gates, as has been described above. A number of the more prominent members of the faculty were watched, and they too followed the general custom of throwing away the cards as soon as they were within the university gates.

It is asking too much to require that the students carry such advertisements until they get to a waste paper box. They are usually not worth that much effort. It is equally unfair that such bills should be permitted to litter the campus and that the university should be put to the necessary expense of gathering them up. The only solution, then, is for some action to be taken to prevent such articles from tracting attention before they were twenty-five. Lord Clive left his pen and ledger to save India to the British at twenty-three, and Descartes at the same age evolved the idea on which his reformation of philosophy was based."

collegiate contest this season and its work will be watched with interest. The men from the Mound City are said to be fairly strong this year and they will make a strong bid for the individual honors.

This afternoon the varsity baseball squad will meet the Lincoln western league team at Antelope park at 3:30 o'clock in the first game between the Guys and the Cornhuskers for this spring. The collegians are expected to give the leaguers a hard rub, and many of the students will go out to the park to see the opening exhibition.

The next baseball game in the fraternity league is scheduled to be played between Alpha Theta Chi and Delta Tau Delta at the Vine street grounds Monday afternoon. It probably will occur at 12:30 o'clock.

BOEHLER IS SUCCEEDING WELL

Former Gymnasium Director Makes Good in Washington.

Mr. J. F. Bohler, who was last year assistant physical director at the University of Nebraska, is making a great success of his work as physical director and basket-ball coach at the University of Washington. He has taken so prominent a part in the direction of athletics at that institution that the college paper devoted a column in a recent edition to an appreciation of his work. It speaks of him as follows:

"Washington state college has made a decided acquisition in the securing of J. F. Bohler, who is taking a prominent part in the direction of athletics in this institution.

"Mr. Bohler, in addition to being physical director and conducting large classes in gym work, has charge of the coaching of the track and basketball teams as well as of the wrestlers and boxers. In addition to being a first class coach of basket ball, he is a splendid player as was demonstrated by his work on the faculty five recently."

The junior hop committee will meet in Memorial hall at 11:30, Tuesday, April 6.
