The inter-collegiate gymnastic contest which will be held in the armory this evening is an event that should receive the hearty support of the student body. For the first time in the history of the university this meet is to be held at Nebraska and if it arouses here the interest that it has aroused at other schools the capacity of the gymnasium will be taxed this evening. It is even more than a question of school loyalty; it is a question of enabling the management to meet the heavy expenses that it is forced to meet. Such an event as this cannot fall to be one of interest from the beginning to the end.

Those who have kept track of the work of the Nebraska State Historical society can only feel the deepest regret that the new building of the society which was in actual process of construction must now be abandoned for another two years at least. Not only are the present quarters of the society so crowded that the amount of material that has been crowded into them is a marvel, but the rooms tain indiscretions and because of his attitude upon certain subjects. It has rarely happened that the world has lost three such brilliant characters within such a short space of time.

The university is the real home of culture and art and the real dependence of those who hope for a broader and deeper development of culture. The university is indirectly the inspiration of the best work that is done along all the lines of art and literature and science. The university is the institution that is most interesting in the work that is being done by the leaders in all these fields and it is the university public that will most deeply feel the passing of these three masters.

It would be fitting that the university should take some notice of the death of these individuals, among the most noted in their respective lines in the world. It would be fitting that some action should be taken either through the departments most concerned, or otherwise, that would bring before the students in clear form, the value of the work that these individuals have performed for the world of literature and art.

It is by keeping in active touch with the work that is being done every day in the practical world that the university will be enabled to take its position as a leader in the active world. It will not do for the university to confine its attentions to a study of the past, but it must take an active interest in the present. It is therefore fitting that the death of three people who have had a wide influence on the art and literature of the age should receive more than passing notice at the university.

NOTICE.

All members of the board are requested to be present in uniform at the gymnastic contest tonight at 7:30.

themselves are badly needed for use by regular university classes. The only result of the veto of the appropriation bill will be that both the work of the society and of the university will be seriously crippled for several years for lack of adequate room.

A TRIPLE LOSS.

It is a striking fact that within the past few weeks three people who have made enduring reputations in the world of literature and art, Madame Modjeska, F. Marion Crawford and Algernon Charles Swinburne have passed away. Not an actress of great physical charm, Madame Modjeska was yet distinguished by the exquisite refinement and grace of her work and won many notable triumphs. F. Marion Crawford was one of the most widely read novelists of the present day and his influence was always powerful in support of the highest and best both in life and in literature. Swinburne was a poet of rare genius, whose work has, however, never been fully appreciated because of cer-

REGENT ALLEN WILL PRESIDE

Oratorical Contest of Students' Debating Club Tonight.

Charles S. Allen, president of the board of regents, has been asked to preside at the oratorical contest to be held by the students' debating club this evening. As a gold medal and a silver trophy will be given to the winners prominent members of the faculty have been chosen to act as judges in the contest. The judges will be Professor George E. Condra, Professor Hutton Webster and Professor S. B. Gass.

The contest has aroused considerable interest not only among members of the club, but among students who are interested in oratorical work as well. Only those who are members of the club are, however, permitted to enter in the contest. Those who have signified their intention of taking part thus far are Mr. Warren, A. C. Robertson, H. E. Dixon, A. M. Hare and Ross Bates.

Thursday evening a meeting of the freshman inter-fraternity organization known as the Spikes, held a meeting at the Kappa Sigma fraternity house.
