TUESDAY, APRIL 20, 1909.

The advisor of women of the University of Missouri has at last admitted in a published interview that "Missouri does produce handsome women" and that "the girls do dress well." Strange isn't it? Perhaps if the authorities were duly coaxed and gently urged they might be willing to admit that after all, on the whole, Missouri is a pretty good school, with pretty good professors.

The report that Landscape Gardner Dunman will take active steps to improve the appearance of the city campus is welcome news to those who have an eye for the beautiful and who are troubled by an unnecessary display of ugliness. The most pleasing part of the whole thing, however, is the statement that the rear part of the campus will be plowed up and sown to grass. If this is done it will no longer be possible for student when they come back each fall to labor under the delusion that the back part of the campus has been used during the summer as a hayfield.

CONVOCAATION---Tuesday, April 20

wishes of the cadet battalion and the officers in charge that the cadet encampment be held at some other place than Lincoln. It was decided, at a meeting of the senate last evening, that the encampment this year would be held at Ashland where the government rifle range makes an unusually good location. This decision settles in a manner satisfactory to all, a question which has caused an endless amount of talk and aroused a great deal of strong opposition.

The proposition of having the encampment start immediately after the close of examination week does away with one of the greatest difficulties of the encampment. The plan will not work a hardship upon anyone and it entirely overcomes the difficulty of breaking in on the time for study just before the final examinations. In the past the student has been forced to drop his studies just at the time when they demanded the most attention, and to go to a camp from which he returned to take his final examinations, all worn out and in no physical condition to do his best work.

It may seem at first sight that such a plan would work a hardship upon the seniors who would be engaged with the many duties of commencement week. When it is remembered, however, that the battalion would leave the Friday of examination week, and return early commencement week, it is seen that the new arrangement reduced the inconvenience to the minimum.

The plan of how best to arrange the annual encampment has long been an unsettled question, and the manner in which camp has been held in the past has been far from satisfactory in many ways. The new plan is a compromise between the different interests at stake and, as far as any forecast of the future can be

The memorial service in honor of the late Dr. Canfield is an appropriate recognition on the part of the university authorities of the work that he did while chancellor for the upbuilding and development of the University of Nebraska. Now that the authorities have done their part it is up to the students to show their appreciation of his work by attending the service and leaving not a single vacant seat in Memorial hall on Friday morning. Among the students who are now attending school here the value of the work that Dr. Canfield did is not understood or appreciated, but among those who know of the early struggles of the university, before it had an established reputation and during the dark years, when successive crop failures brought thousands of Nebraska families to the verge of despair, and when his energy and push was all that kept the university forging steadily ahead, one finds the deepest respect and love for Dr. Canfield. The university public owes it to themselves and to the school to see that the special convocation Friday morning is the most largely attended of the year.

ADOPTS GOOD PLAN.

The university senate has at last yielded to the almost unanimous made. It should produce the best camp of any plan that has been suggested.

METHODISTS BEAT NEBRASKANS

Error in Seventh Gives Them Game by 5 to 4 Score.

With two men on bases and two out, Prouty, playing right field for the cornhuskers, dropped a high fly in the seventh inning of a game between the state university team and Wesleyan at University Place yesterday afternoon, permitting the Methodists to run in two scores and win the contest. Up to that session the cornhuskers had played an errorless game and had had the Wesleyan bunch outplayed. Mathers pitched for Nebraska and had the Methodists at his mercy. Farthing, on the slab for Wesleyan, was hit freely.

Score by Innings: Nebraska .....000 004 000—4 Wesleyan .....110 000 300—5 Batteries—Mathers and Green, Nebraska; Farthing and Stringfellow, Wesleyan.

The members of the Phi Delta fraternity held a house party Saturday evening at the chapter house, in honor of the Delta Delta sorority. About twenty couples were present.
