THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1909.

Ivy Day can only be made a success by the co-operation of all classes in the university. The presidents of all the classes have called meetings for the near future to discuss plans and it is now up to the students to do their part by taking sufficient interest in the matter to attend the class meetings. Last year Ivy Day proved to be one of the most pleasant events of the year and it is certainly important that it be developed until it becomes firmly established as a Nebraska institution.

During the morning hours when there are the most classes at the university the number of students who have to enter and leave buildings in a short space of time has resulted in many cases in the doorways becoming so jammed that it is nearly impossible to get in or out. Where this results from the fact that the doorways are too small, there can be of course no blame attached to anyone. The truth is, however, that in many cases where there are double doors, one of them is locked shut and every-manent in their character and adequate to the needs of a school of the size and importance of Nebraska. Because of lack of money it has been necessary in constructing many of the buildings on the campus and in making many other improvements to act with a view of having the work completed at some later time. The attitude has resulted in crippling many lines of activities at Nebraska and can only have a similar effect upon athletics. In constructing the new field let us build the very best we can, but let us do what we do for all time. One of the surest indications of the standing of a school is to be found in the way athletics are supported by the students and in the manner in which the athletic department has been fitted up. Nebraska has been hopelessly left in the rear in this matter by other western schools and the time has come for her to take the same position in this regard that her achievements have gained for her in every other line.

The plan for the new field which is shown on the front page of today's Nebraskan makes provision not only for football, but for all the other principal sports at the university. A fine cinder track would be provided, there would be room for a good baseball diamond, and if so desired a place could also be found for tennis courts. With proper equipment such a field as this would be as good as could be desired and would give Nebraska athletics every advantage which sister institutions now possess. It is to be hoped that some plan can be devised whereby the new Nebraska field can be fitted up in the way that it deserves.

PAINLESS PHYSICAL CULTURE.

Not contented with the progress of modern science and the achievements of recent years the Daily Maroon of the University of Chicago proposes the one is forced to go through a single doorway. It would seem that it would be possible to keep these doorways open except in the most inclement weather.

NEW NEBRASKA FIELD.

This morning at the meeting of the regents, definite action will be taken regarding the new athletic field. The general plan to be pursued in the purchase of lots and arrangement of the field has been informally determined for several days, but this morning formal action will be taken by the board.

The fact that Nebraska will have some kind of an athletic field for next year has now become a settled one; but the details as to the arrangement of the field and the manner in which it shall be fitted up are still undecided. It is now to be determined, whether the new field shall be fitted up in a manner that will be adequate and permanent or whether conditions will be such that the authorities can only fit up a temporary field and leave the permanent improvements to be added at a later time.

Now that Nebraska has before it the proposition of fitting up a new field every effort should be made to see that the improvements that are being made on the new field shall be per-idea of painless physical culture. The plan is interesting because of its novelty and its latent possibilities. Here is how the Daily Maroon describes the idea.

"Dr Anderson, director of the Yale gymnasium, has put forward the entertaining and highly acceptable theory that a person can get exercise not only by working, but by watching somebody else work. Dr. Anderson in stating his views on the subject before the American Physical Education association at Philadelphia the other day said, 'The mere observation of physical tests and exercises will produce unconscious but largely similar effects on the onlooker as on the person actually engaged in the work.' "Dr Anderson arrived at his conclusions after a series of tests in which he made use of the men who had managed to get out of the regular gym work, proving to his satisfaction that the arm muscles of each onlooker worked unconsciously in unison with those of the man at a lifting machine, the result being perceptibly beneficial. German psychologists in their investigations have arrived at similar conclusions, labeling the reaction responsible for the phenomenon 'einfuehlen.' "By all means let us have our physical culture administered by this painless method. Let us fill the bleachers at the ball games and the track meets and have the satisfaction of knowing that we are not only supporting the varsity team, but are indulging by proxy in the most healthful of exercises.

Happenings of the Past

- Seven Years Ago. The baseball team left upon an extended northern trip. The greatest interest of the trip centered in the two games to be played with Minnesota.
- Six Years Ago. The Glee Club had more demands for dates from the towns of the state than it was able to fill. Entertainments were given every week end throughout the state.
- Five Years Ago. The Nebraska girls' basketball team defeated Minnesota in Lincoln by the score of 30 to 18. This was almost a reversal of the score of a game played by the teams two months earlier in Minneapolis.
- Three Years Ago. Complaint was made that spring football practice was not receiving proper support. About thirty men were trying out.
- One Year Ago. Issue of the Daily Nebraskan was devoted to the interests of the Glee Club. A concert was given by the club at the Oliver and drew a large crowd.
- Freshman Class Meeting. There will be a meeting of the freshman class on Friday, April 23, at 5:00 p. m., in Memorial hall to discuss Ivy Day plans.
