SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1909.

It is impossible that Nebraska have a very strong track team with so very few men out as have been at work during the last few days. Dr. Clapp has made it known that more men are needed, and this should be sufficient to cause the squad to be materially enlarged at once.

The final settlement of the disputed question of "Sneak Day" leaves both sides with all that they have demanded. The university authorities are no longer put in the position of having a class in the university defy them, while the senior class is accorded the privilege of having a day that is distinctively its own which shall be kept a secret from undergraduates. This is another illustration of the fact that it is always possible to find a common meeting ground without resorting to an open struggle.

UNGRATEFULNESS EVEN HERE.

There are times when one is led to wonder whether the thoughtlessness and indifference which is shown by students at the University of Nebraska body was one of delight that some means of escape from class had been offered without ever a thought for the man in whose honor the classes had been dismissed.

It is such an event as this that leads many to claim that as a class students are the most ungrateful, the most inconsiderate, the most indifferent body of people in the world. The thought that the services might be tiresome was sufficient to keep a large part of the student body away. Think what it would mean for Nebraska, if, at such a time, the feeling could be unanimous that four years of sacrifice for the good of this school deserved at least one hour of sacrifice, if such it might be called, on the part of every student in remembrance of what had been accomplished for the upbuilding of the university.

One expects that the great mass of people which makes up the world outside of college will be ungrateful and forget those who have spent their time and their energy in striving for it. It seems, however, that, while in college, the student who is free from the struggle for existence, and who is supposed to be spending his time in a study of the higher side of life, might find time to raise the level of practice a little above that found even among the lowest classes.

Mr. Nye Morehouse called the class to order and, after the reports of various committees were disposed of, the class proceeded to the election of a managing editor for next year's "Cornhusker." There were two candika is characteristic of college men and women the country over or whether such conditions must be owned as peculiar to Nebraska alone. There are times when the attitude of the student body as a whole must be discouraging and humiliating to those who see deeply and feel deeply. Now and then an event occurs which must take all the enthusiasm out of the work of those who are giving their time for the upbuilding of this institution. Yesterday morning a special memorial service was held in honor of the memory of the late ex-Chancellor Canfield. One of the best musical programs of the year was arranged for while two of the most prominent professors in the university, and the Honorable Victor Rosewater of Omaha gave short addresses. All claims were excused so that there would be nothing to prevent every student from attending, and yet as a matter of fact hardly one-fourth of the student body was present.

The service was in honor of Dr. Canfield, a man to whom the very existence of the university as one of the largest institutions of the West is due; a man who gave four of the best years of his life to hard and earnest work to push the university forward. As far as one could observe the only feeling on the part of the student dates for this office, neither of whom had done any campaigning to speak of. Mr. Guy Reed had announced his candidacy some time during the morning and Mr. K. P. Frederick only decided to run ten minutes before the hour set for the voting. Mr. Reed was elected by a majority of three, receiving fifteen votes to Mr. Frederick's eleven. Mr. Reed is a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. The meeting next proceeded to the election of an assistant business manager for next year's Cornhusker. Mr. Leslie Hyde being the only candidate for the place, the class voted to make his election unanimous. Only one candidate, Mr. Lynn Lloyd, was also announced for student member of the publication board. Mr. Lloyd's election was made unanimous. Mr. Lloyd, who succeeds M. J. Lawrence, will not occupy a place on the board until next year. He is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity.
