At an address delivered recently Professor Nathan Bernstein of the Omaha high school declared that a college trains a man for life and not for a living as universities do, and concluded from this that the college is the better institution. Perhaps it is needless to say that Professor Bernstein is himself a graduate of a college. The rapid rate with which the great universities of the land are developing and leaving behind the older colleges indicates that the American people have reached different conclusions on this subject from those advocated by Professor Bernstein.

While Western colleges are looking for ways of raising their entrance requirements and making the scholarship standard more rigid Eastern colleges are at the same time considering the advisability of lowering their standards. President Butler of Columbia recently expressed the strong belief that American colleges must soon find the necessity of recognizing the large class of men who go to college merely because it is the thing to do, and not for the purpose of serious study. He further declared that it would probably be necessary for colleges to establish special "pass" courses for these men, differentiating the work from that provided for those who seek scholarship, who would be placed in another, an "honor" course.

Such a proposal as this will find scant favor in the West. The Western man has little use for the person who desires to waste four years of his time in the polite occupation of doing nothing. Men's finishing schools may fill a long felt want in the East, but as long as there exists in the West the public sentiment which is now found here there will be no demand for a lowering of the requirements of Western colleges.

Observing writers even today do not hesitate to declare that in the West there is a much more earnest and enthusiastic interest in education than in the East. If during the next few years the colleges of the East follow the suggestion of President Butler and decrease their requirements at the same time that the West is raising theirs we shall shortly see all the great centers of learning in the West while the East will be left to make the best of its finishing schools.

At The Play Houses

The Majestic.

Foy and Clark in "The Spring of Youth," hailed all season as one of the best acts in vaudeville, came to the Majestic Monday evening and proved their just claim to that reputation. The sketch is a saona from the opening to the close. Foy's fishing and clam-eating feat set the house to roaring with laughter.

The Astalres, the best pair of juvenile singers and dancers that have this year come west, were accorded an ovation last evening. They made a triumph in Omaha in December and promise to repeat their achievement here.

The interpretation of two old characters in "Sweethearts," by Mr. and Mrs. Connelly was good. This is an act that touches the sentimental as well as the artistic side and is a success.

Elona, "The Squaw Girl," is agile, pretty and has a sweet voice that gives her act a leading place on this week's bill.

Isabell Howell and Company in "Games of Childhood," sang two or three songs that pleased the first-nighters immensely.

Eddie Play Burns, in planologue and Lizzie Daly, terpsichorean dancers, are far above the average.

The Zoological club will meet at 8 p. m. this evening in the Zoological lecture room, in N. 210. The following program will be given: "Early Octogenetic Phenomena in Mammals," by Hubrecht; reviewed by W. A. Willard. "Review of Certain Points in the Structure of the Tornaria," by A. T. Masterman; reviewed by M. R. Daughters.

STUDENT ANNUAL CONFISCATED

Cartoons of Dean and Girl Student Cut From Edition.

The annual edition of the "Quax," Drake university's student publication, was confiscated recently by the faculty and its editors threatened with possible expulsion unless two objectionable cartoons were withdrawn. The edition was published at a cost of $3,000 and the student board of editors finally agreed to expurgate the edition. The offensive cartoons of Dean Frederick Norton of college of liberal arts and Miss Bessie Gringradi, student in medical department, were cut out of 1,250 copies.

The cartoons reflected upon Dean Norton's methods in class and Miss Gringradi's criticism of certain members of her class.

It is reported that four professors in the University of Minnesota went on a long hike recently, and that they have not yet recovered. An instructor in economics fainted twice on the way.

The Kansan, in urging the students to support the May Festival, says: "A person does not have a well-rounded education unless he can appreciate something higher than 'rag-time' in music."

A yellow journal, "Breezy Point Times," is to appear at North Dakota soon to advertise the play to be given there by the girls of the school. The paper is to be printed in green ink on yellow paper.

ANOTHER JOURNALISM SCHOOL

Practical Courses Will Be Given in Spokane College.

P. M. Glasoe, president of Spokane college, announces that a course in practical journalism, consisting of lectures on the various phases of newspaper work, will begin September 13. The newspapers in Spokane will co-operate with the college in the work.

Training will be given in the best lines of study to prepare for newspaper work. Students will be instructed in the various branches of writing for the press, in the make-up of a newspaper, the work in the composing room, methods of conducting the circulation and advertising departments, and in soliciting, collecting and general management.

SECRET SOCIETIES ARE BARRED

Undemocratic, Say Regents of Oklahoma Agricultural School.

The board of agriculture has put an emphatic veto upon all attempts to organize Greek letter fraternities or other secret societies at the A. & M. college at Stillwater, on the ground that they are undemocratic and interfere with the real work of the school.

Several attempts have been made lately to effect such organization, but all met with the same fate. The question was brought up a number of years ago under the territorial regime and with the same result as at this time.

Indiana has a rabies scare now, and several there are to be compelled to take the Pasteur treatment. The house dog of the Emanon club there has been attacked by the disease, and has died from it. Just before taking sick, he was petted by several people on the campus, and all these have been declared in danger.

The North Dakota girls have started baseball practice.

The freshmen and preps at North Dakota had a class scrap recently.
