"The Scarlet and Cream." One man has offered his idea of what the new Nebraska song should be. Let not others be backward.

The announcement that the fees charged for mechanical engineering work would be rebated in proportion to the amount of time lost before the students can enter the new building has relieved the wounded feelings of many students. There were quite a number of discontents who were beginning to make the engineering department the mark for all sorts of hard words. These men didn't stop to consider the fact that when they finally do get to work they will have a vastly better equipment than last year's students, altho the fees are the same as for several years past. But it is best that the fees be remitted, so long as there be a single student who felt it unjust otherwise. For a little knocking is harmful—more so than the loss of a few dollars.

past two days. The impression prevails among football dopesters that Coach Cole is up against a stiff problem and that the chances of a happy solution of the difficulty are not bright. Cole is himself quoted as saying that the lack of a veteran line may prove the undoing of the Cornhusker team in the series of contests which open next Saturday.

That the prospects for the coming season are not of the best is indeed readily admitted, altho there are many who have not yet decided that all the indications point to the bad. The practice at the state farm this week has been slow—exasperatingly slow. The men have seemingly failed to get into the game with the ginger that a winning team should begin to show at this time of the season. Something is wrong and the dopesters claim that the whole trouble might be remedied if Collins, Ewing, and Wolcott were back in the game.

Collins played center in both 1907 and 1908 and his work in both seasons was strong. He is now probation officer of the city of Lincoln, and so far he has been unwilling to relinquish his paying position for a football education on the Nebraska field. Cole has spent a week endeavoring

AS TO ADVERTISERS.

With each day the Daily Nebraskan is seeking to enlarge its list of advertisers. It is constantly endeavoring to persuade the merchants of Lincoln that its columns are a profitable means of reaching the university public. These merchants are business men. They do not believe in doing that which yields them no return. They advertise in the Nebraskan because they believe that the advertisements are read by the university students and that the students are attracted by the wares so displayed. It is plainly a business proposition with them and they are not guided by sentiment.

This being so, the success of the Nebraskan manager in soliciting advertisements depends wholly upon the manner in which the readers of the paper patronize the men who aid him. If they pay little attention to the advertisements of the paper, either by not reading them, or by not following out the suggestions made therein, the Nebraskan loses patronage that is worth much to it. Subscriptions do not pay for publishing this paper. The advertisements constitute the bulk of the receipts. The welfare of the paper therefore depends upon the students in the advertising as well as in the subscription department. It is a fact stated by many advertisers that the students at Wesleyan and Cotner patronize them better in proportion to the advertising in the school papers of those colleges than do the university men. These students, they say, think it loyalty to their school paper to aid its patrons. So it should be with university students.

Patronize our advertisers. It helps them, us, and finally you.

COLLINS, EWING, AND WOLCOTT. "Gloom Hangs Over Nebraska Grid-iron."

That or something similar has been the heading in several of the papers featuring football news during the

to find someone capable of taking his place, but so far his efforts have been vain, and, unless Colling finally decides to throw up his job for the football season, the center position cannot but be weak.

Ewing and Wolcott, strong men for guard and tackle positions, are up against the scholarship rule and both must pass special examinations before they can line up with the varsity squad. Captain Beltzer is not in the best of physical condition, owing to sickness during the summer, and this adds to the worries of the coach.

With these four men out of the game, four distinct places in the Cornhusker line-up are weakened. Could Collins, Ewing, and Wolcott come back, the line would be much strengthened and Nebraska's chances would not appear nearly so slim as they seem now. The calamity talk is not faked, if the words of Cole and Manager Eager count for anything. The Nebraska team is in reality in bad shape and the whole situation revolves about Collins, Ewing, and Wolcott.

If Ewing and Wolcott pass their tests, if Collins will sacrifice his financial gain for the sake of the Cornhusker glory, then—but, will they?

NEBRASKA SCHOLAR TO OXFORD CHOSEN

EXAMINATIONS UNDER RHODES TRUST OCT. 19-20.

GREEK OMITTED FROM SCHEDULE

Effort Being Made to Get Men of Good All-round Ability Rather Than Mere "Grinds."

With the announcement that examinations will soon be held for the Rhodes scholarship, many Nebraska undergraduates are getting busy reviewing their Latin and mathematics. The graduation from Oxford in June of Samuel Rinaker will leave a vacancy from this state which will be filled by one of those passing the examination to be held next month. The examination will be held the 19th and 20th of October and will be open to any student who has reached at least the end of his sophomore year.

The scholar chosen from this state will take up his residence at Oxford next fall. Two scholars are chosen from each state, but some of the states, as Wyoming, have not been taking advantage of the offer. The Rhodes scholarship has heretofore been more widely advertised and sought after in the east than in the west, but the institution of a few changes in the examination schedule it is believed will attract a larger number of competitors. Heretofore Latin, Greek and mathematics comprised the three subjects upon which a candidate was examined. Many students disliked the idea of taking Greek merely for the sake of competing for the scholarship and so were debarred from competing.

Greek is Omitted.

This has been changed, however and a competitor is now allowed to take the examination in Latin and mathematics, and if he should be chosen, to make up the Greek requirement later.

Another change in the policy heretofore followed in the choosing of the Rhodes scholars is the recognition now given to the general ability of the candidate in other lines besides scholarship. Athletic ability, popularity with fellow students, personal character and many other similar attainments and characteristics all now play their part in the choosing of the lucky scholar. The examinations have been lightened this year for the purpose of allowing more candidates a chance to pass and so as to obtain a wider selection of men representing the other attainments in combination with scholarship. All of this has been done so as to eliminate the mere grind and secure the good all-around man.

Is Attractive Life.

A Rhodes scholar receives $1,500 a year, and according to the Nebraska representative at Oxford at present, living expenses are lower there than here. Student life at Oxford is described as delightful. According to the college system of that school each student rooms in the college in which he is taking his work. The student has two rooms, in which he may give entertainments to his friends. Much time is spent in travel on the continent, the expense of such travel coming easily within the means of the Rhodes scholar. The American students at Oxford carried off over fifty per cent of the athletic honor's last year. They are scholars in the true sense of the word and are described as the cream of American manhood.

Sam Rinaker of Beatrice, who will graduate there in June, has been spending the summer in this country. George Marsh of Cotner is the other representative of this state at Oxford at the present time. He will receive his degree in 1911.

MISS EAVES TAKES PH.D. DEGREE

Department of Sociology Assistant Returns from Work in New York.

Miss Eaves, assistant professor of Practical Sociology, has just returned from New York, where she recently received the degree of Ph.D. Miss Eaves had to defer the taking of this degree for some years, as at the time she was about to take it she was called to San Francisco to assist Dr Davine at the time of the earthquake. She presented as her thesis for her degree a section of her work on "Labor Legislation in California," which is now being published by the University of California.
