Advice to freshmen—Watch out or the frat men will git ye!

South Dakota correspondents say that the northern university has a "speedy quarterback." Now, did you ever really hear of a varsity quarter who wasn't dubbed "speedy"?

The appointment of Miss Alice Ensign to be acting adviser to women meets with the approval of the university public. The office is one which requires ability, good judgment, and tact. Miss Ensign has all of these qualities and she should encounter no trouble in her administration of the office.

The annual Y. M. C. A. stag reception to new students comes off tonight in the Armory. Secretary Der Kindern says that it will not be a "paddle social." That much being assured, there is no reason why univerhuskers will show unlooked for offensive power will be known only after they have proven their ability to break through the Dakota line.

A splendid victory today means inspiration to the Nebraska squad in its practice of the next two weeks, during which time it must prepare for the contest with Minnesota. A low score, gained only by expending the best energy that the team can summon to its aid, means discouragement to the men and coaches. Today is a crucial contest, not perhaps in its direct influence on the percentage of the Nebraska score-card, but important indeed in its effect on the personnel of the team.

Loyal Nebraska students, recognizing the necessity of a strong inspiration to the team this afternoon, will not hesitate in attending the first game of the season. They should be out in large numbers at Antelope park to help their team win the first battle. It is THEIR battle that is being fought, not the team's alone, and they should so look upon it. Let them attend this afternoon and LET THEM ROOT.

A MISTAKEN CLAMOR.

than the non-driller. If the war is a great one, he is certain to be given a place as a non-commissioned officer at the start and advancement will be rapid, for his competitors will largely be men who have not drilled.

The advantages of such a position are not small. The pay of the officer is much in advance of that of the private. The conditions of life are very much better and, inasmuch as wretched commissary service seems to be a leading feature of American wars, this consideration counts for much. With these things in view then the man who has to drill may well console himself with the thought that he may some day thank his lucky stars that he had to.

Remember Don Cameron. He is issuing coupon books at a discount this year, and has fitted up an adjoining room with tables. 115-119 So. 12th.

The state superintendent of schools of New York declares that the value of New York property has increased nearly $2,000,000 in the last few years owing to the improvement from trees, shrubs and flowers planted by pupils and teachers on successive Arbor days. The total value of the state's school property is $88,000,000.

sity men should be afraid to attend. They are sure of a warm welcome, even if paddles do not aid in the occasion.

The news that an arrangement has been made whereby university students who desire to teach before finishing their university course can receive a certificate good for three years is a pleasant one to the university public. Such students as may take advantage of the new ruling are fully as able to take the positions which they may assume as are the normal school and minor college graduates who have always had the privilege now accorded university students. The university standard has not been lowered. A temporary expedient of justice has been introduced. The teachers' college should have the thanks of the teachers for extending them this additional convenience.

THE GAME TODAY.

Nebraska meets her first gridiron rival of the 1909 season at Antelope park today. South Dakota will contest on the football field for athletic honors against the Cornhusker athletes.

It matters not that the contest is in all probability an easy one. The mere fact that the Vermillion university is not one of first rank in the football column should not be counted as something to discount the importance of the game this afternoon. Today will show better than all the work of the past two weeks just what sort of a team Nebraska has. The practice which Coach Cole and Assistant Coach Harvey have been putting the Cornhusker squad through at the state farm grounds has not been as encouraging as it should be. Whether the game today will develop discouraging faults or inspiring, even if unexpected, strength is a question which will not be known until the Nebraska line submits itself to the charge of the South Dakota attack. Whether the Corn arises a wall of agony from university students who are forced to take military drill. The first few periods of drill are sufficiently novel to be interesting, but as the steady grind begins and the novelty wears off the cadet who does not begin to find fault with the system is an exception. There is no doubt but that there is some cause for complaint. Military drill is not pleasurable, especially when it breaks in for an hour each day on the work of the student. It is wearisome and troublesome, and the advantages gained seem slight. The physical and mental discipline do not appeal to the student as worth the trouble.

But there are other advantages of drill which should appeal to the student who has an eye to the future, and which have caused many men to regret that they did not drill instead of getting out on some flimsy excuse. These are benefits which come to the man who has drilled in case of war. In a time of peace like the present talk of war may seem out of place, but it is nevertheless a fact that many men well informed on the intricacies of international politics believe an American war to be a not improbable development of the near future. If such a war comes within the next ten or twenty years, the volunteers will make up the great part of the American army and they will be drafted largely from the young men of the nation.

And in a war calling for a great number of volunteers, where does the ex-university cadet rank? He is undoubtedly in a position way in advance of the man who has not drilled. The officers of the cadet battalion are certain to receive commissions in the volunteer service of at least the rank they held in the cadet body. If they are forcibly drafted, they can demand this much. The chances are that they will be given larger commands. But aside from the officers, the ex-cadet is sure to be shown better treatment

In Paris a new society has just been established called "The Universal Telepathic Club." Each member of the new organization undertakes to become a source of mental assistance to his fellow members by the use of telepathy. At a given hour daily every member of the club thinks hard of his fellow members and expresses a mental wish for their general well-being. The result is said to be encouraging. Within an average of twenty minutes after the telepathic communication has taken place, each member, it is said, feels a sensation of great buoyancy, which enables him to continue his occupation, whatever it is, with fresh hope and contentment. In fact, one facetious newspaper writer lately gave an account of this club under the caption "Telepathy as a Cocktail."
