The song recital at convocation this morning by Miss Harriet Cooke is of especial interest to university students. Miss Cooke is not only a graduate of the university, but she has had an interesting life and possesses ability of rare quality. Her work this morning should be of superior quality. The fact that she will sing two compositions of a former Nebraska student, Miss Flora Bullock, enhances the interest of the occasion still further.

Interest in athletics just now centers in football. It is gratifying, how-cellent defenses of their positions. In the more academic departments critical and constructive works have been written which have attracted much attention among scholars. This has been one of the potent influences which has given Nebraska the position which she now commands among the state universities of the country.

With the beginning of the academic year there will be opened at the school of education in the University of Chicago a laboratory for the study of educational problems. There have been carried out in recent years in psychological laboratories many investigations which have had very close relation to educational problems, but the movement toward the development of a separate laboratory for such studies is relatively new. Such laboratories exist at two or three of the leading universities in Europe. The equipment of this laboratory at the University of Chicago will in some respects resemble the equipment of a psychological laboratory, but there will be special devices for investigating writing and reading, and the other forms of mental activity which are developed in school work. The organization of this laboratory promises much for the development of a science of education.

There are men right now in school who might help the Nebraska team to a big degree by donning their suits and playing the game. They are not doing it. In some cases they have reasons which are fully sufficient to explain their action. In other cases they have not good explanations. These latter cases are the ones which the loyal Nebraska students fail to appreciate.

There should be no question in an athlete's mind over getting out and helping his team if such action were at all possible. No petty ill-feeling toward certain other members of the team or towards one of the coaches should be allowed to sway him from his duty. No "grouch" should allow a man to forget that he is a Nebraska student, and as such under obligations to do the best that is in him for his school.

If any of these things are responsible for the attitude of some of Nebraska's football possibilities, let them be forgotten at once. Nebraska needs football material. Help Coach Cole to feel that he has the whole student body behind him and that he need not be hampered in his real work by such petty problems as are now harrassing him.

ever, to see that other branches of athletics are not idle simply because the students lack general interest in their activity at present. The largest cross-country squad which has ever reported at this university has begun training for the fall runs. Everything indicates that Nebraska will be able to repeat her western intercollegiate victories. Football is a spectacular sport and therefore attracts popular attention, but it is well that the university should stop to realize that Nebraska wins victories on other fields as well.

Nebraska university students and residents of the state in general cannot but be gratified at the appreciation shown Dr. Roscoe Pound in his assuming a chair in the college of law of the University of Chicago. The university regards Roscoe Pound as a product peculiarly her own and he is frequently named as one of her most eminent alumni. He is achieving success in the field of the law, and in addition to the honors there won, he is named as one of the best known botanists in the country. In both his vocation and his avocation, Dr. Pound is doing honor to his alma mater.

The publication of a new book by two of the university's professors calls attention to the fact that Nebraska is not at all backward in this department of educational work. Many of her teachers have contributed works of superior interest and value to modern literature. There is not a university in the west which is represented with either a greater quantity or a better quality of educational writings than is Nebraska. Her professors have frequently taken advanced ground in their respective subjects and they have been able to issue ex-

WHY WE PAY COLE.

Just what is Coach "King" Cole paid for? He is the head coach of Nebraska football and as such he receives a salary. Why does he get it? What services does he return?

From the present circumstances of Cornhusker football it would seem that Cole's principal task was to get men to get out on the field and work for the glory of their school. Since the head-coach came to Lincoln two weeks ago, we venture to say that the problem which has been worrying him more than any other has been that of finding ways and means to get needed material out for practice.

For two weeks the principal center of interest in Cornhusker athletics has been as to whether this man or that man would enter or re-enter the game. At one time or another the students have been intensely interested in the practice of those candidates who were out on the field, or in the result of the game last Saturday. But primarily they have been interested in the men who have not practiced, and who did not play in the Dakota game. They are interested in the actions of these men because it is generally realized that the Cornhusker chances of a winning team would be increased a hundred per cent if a half dozen men now out of the game could be persuaded to come back to the field.

Is this, then, what we pay Coach Cole for? Is he hired for his ability in begging men to support the scarlet and cream? Is his chief function discovering methods of inducing men to play the game?

The Nebraskan does not believe that any of these things are a coach's principal tasks. His time should be devoted to building up a winning eleven from the material which is given him. He should not be bothered with getting down on his knees to possible players in an endeavor to get them out to practice. But Coach Cole is bothered with this work. And it is due not to any desire of his for the task, but to the circumstances which force him to the work. There is no dodging the question.

J. H. Needling and A. C. Faure, from Preforia, Transvaal, have registered as agricultural students at Cornell university. The young men are government students, and recently won scholarships awarded by the Transvaal department of agriculture. Eight scholarships were competed for and the young men who won them are all being sent to this country to be educated in different agricultural colleges.

Ames is to have a harvest home excursion again this year, and is making plans to give a royal reception to the people of the state who will take that opportunity to visit the college. These excursion days have always proven very popular and considerable regret was expressed in all parts of the state when they were discontinued three years ago.

A number of new buildings have been erected since the last excursions were held. Chief among these is the new agricultural hall, which will be in use for the first time this fall. This magnificent building, which is the finest building in the world for the teaching of agriculture, is occupied by the departments of animal husbandry, farm crops, horticulture and forestry, chemistry soils, agricultural journalism and the extension department.

C. H. Purcell, 1905, Alpha Theta Chi, is visiting in Nebraska after two years spent in Peru, South America. Mr. Purcell has been a resident engineer for the Guggenheim smelting interests in the southern republic. He will probably visit Lincoln before he leaves the state.
