stood the plunging attack of Dr. Williams' men at the very last extremity intervening between safety and defeat.

Such has been the record of the past. Tomorrow the Nebraska eleven goes to Omaha to add another chapter to that record of victory, defeat, and tie. Two thousand students will journey with the team to help in making the new chapter a glorious one. Thousands of Omaha citizens, eager that their state may take its proud stand among the leading football commonwealths of the west, will be on hand to give team and students a hearty welcome and to cheer them on to victory.

And it is going to be a victory. Even the pessimist will admit that. For there is no one who will be willing to stand to the front and say that Nebraska's team is not going to acquit itself creditably at the Vinton street park, even if it does not get the big end of the score. Nebraska's eleven has been in the habit of doing the creditable thing. It is in the blood and it is not likely to disappear at this date.

Coach Cole's pupils are going to play a manly game. They are going into the contest confident of playing the game in a way that will win them the stances of infractions since the opening of the year, and it is probably these at which the rules are directed.

Students who consider the matter a moment will find that the regulations are nothing if not eminently fair to all concerned. University students have an inherent dislike to any regulation of their social affairs, and it is probably just as well that they should prefer to feel some independence in such matters. But there is nothing in the rules which is more than all should require without the existence of the rules. The ordinary social conventions obtaining in all good society demand just what the rules now issued ask. A reasonable closing hour and the presence of chaperones is a demand of general society usage and not exclusively a regulation of the university authorities.

Student organizations will find that the rules cause them little trouble, and observance of them insures each organization against any hint of doubt as to their following out of the correct social conventions. For this reason, if for no other, they should be obeyed.

A student remarks that the fire scare in Mechanic Arts hall may have been due to a 'morning after' effect of a Havelock visit. Nay, nay. Was it not a professor who first found it? Nor should anyone be surprised that a little steam should alarm inhabitants of Mechanic Arts. That building has so many fire-trap possibilities that it is no wonder that its residents are always on the watch for a whiff of smoke.

That last straw hat, which has been hanging on since Sept. 1, is gone at last. It was laid away amid the mothballs Tuesday afternoon, brief services being conducted at the grave by Rev. Mr. Owner.

CROSSING THE GOAL.

Seven years ago Nebraska sent her gridiron warriors north and they came back victorious. Four times since then she has sent forth to Minnesota a team of sturdy Cornhuskers and they have come back beaten. Last year the wearers of the Scarlet and Cream journeyed north to the Gopher field and snatched a tie score from under the very shadow of the goal posts. The wonderful stonewall defense of the Nebraska line with-admiration of Nebraskans and Minnesotans alike. They are going to win, if that be possible with the brawn at their command. There is not a weakling among them. So far as effort and 'spirit' can force them down the field, these men of Nebraska are going to plow down the gridiron despite the opposing line of Minnesotans. They are going to show the northern players, as they have shown them time and time again, that this university sends out to fight its battles men of courage, men of brain and brawn, men who can be magnanimous in victory, and, if necessary, noble in defeat. They are men who will fight to the last ditch, men who will play the game with all the fiery energy that their powerful will can summon to their aid until the last whistle is blown, men who will not give up until the timekeeper snaps the watch for the final.

Nebraska's team is going down to Omaha tomorrow to a victory—a victory of score, if possible, but in any case a victory of manhood.

SOCIAL REGULATIONS.

The committee on student organization is just now sending out to student organizations notices calling the attention of these bodies to the rules in force for the regulation of social events which may be given by them. The rules are chiefly the same as those which have stood for several years past. They prohibit affairs of a social nature save on Friday and Saturday evenings and require all university parties to class at 12 midnight. Officially sanctioned chaperones are required at all functions where women are present.

It is presumed that in putting these rules forth, the committee is not aiming to correct any existing wrongs in the social fabric of the university. Most of the rules have been generally observed during the past year and they would in any case continue to be observed by a majority of the students. There have been, however, a few in-

MECHANICAL ENGINEERS MEET.

Will Attempt to Get Branch of American Society of Engineering in Nebraska.

Nebraska may have a branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. This is the substance of the fact that a number of junior and senior mechanical engineers met in M. E. 204 Wednesday evening and organized a temporary society for the purpose of petitioning the American association.

About twenty of the most prominent junior and senior mechanical engineers were present at the meeting. M. E. Streeter was elected president and William Burleigh was elected secretary. The organization which was formed is only temporary, its object being to get a branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. A committee was appointed to frame up the petition.

The temporary organization which was formed is not intended to run in competition with the present engineering society. It will merely attempt to get a branch of the American society here in the belief that besides helping the members themselves, it will greatly benefit the university and the recognition accorded it over the United States to have a branch of this organization established here. At present there are two members of the society here, Professor Richards and Superintendent of Grounds and Buildings Chowens.

WHEN we tell you about Kensington Clothes—either Suits or Overcoats its to let you know about better clothes than you've been in the habit of buying. They cost a little more, of course, but don't think they're expensive for they're not. They're really economical clothes because they keep their shape and look good about twice as long as other clothes.

The new grays and blues, as they come out of our of our new cabinets, pressed ready to put on, will give you more comfort and satisfaction, yes more for your money than any clothes you can buy.
