PLAYING THE GAME.

At last the knocker is silenced. It was sure to come. From the moment the Nebraska team began to brace up after the disastrous game with South Dakota two weeks ago, it was inevitable that, when the chance was offered, Coach Cole's pupils would put to shame the men who were using the hammer. The chance came last Sat-game capable of so many good results should at the same time be the cause of occasional disastrous results. The comparatively large casualty list which existed under the old-style game a few years ago has been greatly lowered, but the possibility of accident still exists.

Considering the great number of men engaged in the game, and the lack of proper safeguards in many instances, the number of accidents is not large. But this fact does not atone to Johnston and the Minnesota team for the unfortunate occurrence Saturday afternoon. It helps the Gopher half-back but little to know that he is one of the few who have suffered in the game. To a man situated as is he, suffering from a painful injury, cut off from participation in a game in which he delights to star, separated from his mates, and kept in a state of exasperating inertia when all the world without is buoyantly alive—to such a man there must indeed come a feeling that fate, as an adder, has turned her sharp fangs undeservedly upon him, and stung him without cause.

But with these bitter thoughts, the Minnesota back has others of another sort to remember. He could carry back with him the plaudits of a crowd

RECEIVE VALUABLE MANUSCRIPT

Historical Society Has Copies of Papers Which Constitute First State History.

The State Historical Society has received several invaluable as well as interesting manuscripts during the summer. There were three of these manuscripts, and together they constitute the first real history ever discovered of this state. One of these manuscripts is an exact copy of the manuscript of John Duncan, who was a missionary among the Indians of Nebraska about the year 1834. This is perhaps the most valuable copy of the three. The two other manuscripts are copies of the manuscripts of Samuel Allis and Moses Merrill.

urday, and the Cornhusker eleven did not fall.

It was a good game. Even the score was good. For whereas Nebraska men expected to lose by a score of from 20 to 30—and it is useless to argue that the student opinion—all in all was otherwise—the Gophers were actually held to a paltry 14 points. Instead of winning easily, as most of the Minneapolis men anticipated, the proteges of Dr. Williams had to work their hardest to secure a victory. It was extremely disappointing to Minnesota, and it is correspondingly gratifying to Nebraska.

And, aside from the score, it was one of the cleanest football exhibitions that has been played in Nebraska for several seasons. There was a notable absence of rough play. There was but little objection to decisions of the officials. Throughout the seventy minutes of play there was a noticeable spirit of good sportsmanship and good manhood. Both Nebraska and Minnesota played a manly game. Both fought hard, held their ground persistently, and took their momentary defeats as mere incentives to more strenuous efforts.

The results of the contest are reviewed on another page of this issue by a man competent to judge. Needless to say, Saturday's contest places Nebraska once more in the front rank of western football. The doubts engendered by the poor showing against South Dakota are removed. Iowa and Kansas now loom up as rivals worthy of the Cornhuskers' skill, but not as the much feared opponents which they were a week ago.

Nebraska has a football team which is worthy of all honor and praise. Its men deserve full approval for their work of the past two weeks.

Let 'em have it.

THE CASE OF JOHNSTON.

The injury to Lyle Johnston, Minnesota's star half-back, in Saturday's game is a lamentable happening. It is to be greatly regretted that a of chivalrous Nebraska rooters, who appreciate a manly player, even when he is opposing the Scarlet and Cream. He could take with him the expressed tributes of the team against whom he fought, and of hundreds of its supporters. He has with him in Minneapolis the admiration and consideration of a university which knows well how to honor her heroes. And, most of all, he has the love of his teammates, as manifested in their action in electing him captain for 1910.

Nebraska university feels for you, too, Johnson, and will look forward towards another meeting with you in recovered health a year from now.

Mr. and Mrs. Evan Sage, who have been spending their honeymoon at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Mr. Sage graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1902.
